Introduction

1.1 Basic Introduction

The English language is one of the most important languages in the world because of its great importance on these languages, and in addition to the many skills that the English language contains, the writing skill is one of the most important skills in the English language. I consider the improvement of writing skills in the English language to be one of the most important skills, because of its great importance in the development of the language, so many people had to focus on English language skills based on the rules and basics of the English language, so we presented in this book an attempt to improve writing in English. There is no doubt that language is an important factor of the progress of nations, and it is an important factor of preserving the civilizations of nations, and therefore it must be learned well through writing and improving this style of writing contributes to strengthening the language for future generations, which will have an influential role in the development of the language and its progress in a stable.

The contribution of writing down languages in the preservation of ancient civilizations, especially when they were writing down these languages on the walls of temples and on the existing monuments, these notations are poisonous to save these civilizations and save these points to our time, and one of the most important civilizations that we are still dealing with is the Egyptian civilization. If we ask the following question how this book will be studied, then we direct the study of this book to the following way, first dividing the book into several sections, Determine each section on a shoe and study it well, for example, select a team for a week, for example, after completing this section, conduct a test on this section and determine the percentage of assimilation of this section, and then the next section is studied and after completion, this section is also evaluated, in addition, the sections that have been studied previously are re-evaluated the following week.

Why this book?

This book is not an essential source for basic language study, but it is considered an effective contribution to language study and therefore to improving writing skills and effective communication skills that contribute a lot to researchers, as we mentioned from the title of the book from level a1 to the level b2, I also recommend solving the exercises on a small notebook and then after checking them, add them to the book so that the exercises are correct and we do not need to re-correct again, and as we mentioned, there is a solution at the end of the book for all the existing exercises. Of course, this solution is a suggested solution, there are many solutions, but we thought we would present this solution in this format.

Regarding our work on the book, it was according to the following format. We rewrote the book again with a new format and added some corrections to the book, in addition to reformatting the solutions or the solution key at the end of the book, thus presenting the book in a new context in a new format so that it is easy and enjoyable for the reader.

We cannot determine the time period that it takes for a student to be able to study this book well, but if we assume that the student studies this book at the rate of one hour per day, he needs 90 hours to complete this book, which is approximately three months. Of course, we specify one hour per day, that is, for the student, he spends half an hour solving the exercises and the first half studying, understanding, trying to absorb, graphs and algorithms that he needs until he forms a complete understanding of the lesson, in line with the current reality. This book is definitely an educational book and not a wiki or story book so that it can be completed within a week or within two days or within three days is a book that needs solution and study and contains a good amount of exercises almost in each chapter or section there are between five to 10 or seven or eight exercises which is a good amount for the learner and therefore we chose a period of 90 days as an approximate percentage that the student can finish it in a lower percentage or can finish it in a larger percentage is a book that contributes to education and not a basic education book.

1.1.1 History of the English language

The history of the English language is a complex narrative shaped by various invasions, cultural influences, and social changes over centuries. It can be broadly divided into several key periods: Old English, Middle English, and Modern English.

- Old English (c. 450-1100)

The origins of the English language trace back to the arrival of three Germanic tribes—the Angles, Saxons, and Jutes—who invaded Britain around the 5th century AD. They displaced the Celtic languages spoken by the indigenous population. The language spoken by these tribes evolved into what we now call Old English, or Anglo-Saxon. Old English was characterized by a rich inflectional system and a vocabulary heavily influenced by Germanic roots. Notable examples of Old English literature include the epic poem Beowulf.

During this period, the language was primarily oral, with the first written records appearing in the late 7th century. The language underwent significant changes due to the influence of Latin, brought by Christian missionaries, and later, Old Norse, due to Viking invasions in the 8th and 9th centuries. By the end of this period, Old English had developed regional dialects, with West Saxon becoming the dominant form due to the political power of the Kingdom of Wessex[1, 2].

- Middle English (c. 1100-1500)

The Norman Conquest in 1066 marked a pivotal transition in the English language. The Normans, who spoke a dialect of Old French, became the ruling class in England, leading to a significant influx of French vocabulary into English. For several centuries, there existed a linguistic divide where the lower classes spoke English and the upper classes spoke French. This period is known as Middle English, which saw a simplification of the grammatical structure and the incorporation of many French words, particularly in law, art, and literature.

By the late 14th century, English regained prominence, especially with the works of Geoffrey Chaucer, whose writing exemplified the Middle English dialect. The language continued to evolve, with the Great Vowel Shift beginning towards the end of this period, dramatically altering pronunciation[1, 4].

- Early Modern English (c. 1500-1800)

The transition to Early Modern English was influenced by several factors, including the Renaissance, which revived classical learning and introduced many Latin and Greek terms into English. The invention of the printing press in the 15th century also played a crucial role in standardizing English spelling and grammar, as printed materials became more accessible.

The Great Vowel Shift, which occurred during this period, fundamentally changed the pronunciation of vowels in English. Notable literary figures such as William Shakespeare and the translators of the King James Bible contributed to the richness of Early Modern English, making it more expressive and nuanced [1, 2, 3].

Late Modern

- Late Modern English (c. 1800-Present)

The late 18th and 19th centuries saw the emergence of Late Modern English, characterized by an expansion in vocabulary due to the Industrial Revolution and the British Empire's global reach. English absorbed words from various languages as it came into contact with different cultures. This period also witnessed the establishment of English as a global lingua franca, particularly in the context of trade and diplomacy.

Today, English continues to evolve rapidly, influenced by technology, globalization, and cultural exchange. New words and phrases are constantly being added, reflecting changes in society and communication methods, such as the rise of the internet and social media[1, 4, 5].

1.2 Introduction of Book "English Sentence builder"

Writing skills are usually the most difficult skills to acquire in a language. This is particularly true in a foreign language. The goal of this book is to reduce that difficulty as it guides you through the various types of structures in the English language and illustrates how those structures combine to make sentences.

Naturally, in order to acquire writing skills, you have to write. Therefore, you will be provided with an abundance of writing exercises. Some will require a small variation in a given sentence. Others will provide you with a series of words that you form into an appropriate sentence. And you will have plenty of opportunity for coming up with original sentences of your own. This development of writing better English sentences moves gradually and with careful explanation from the least complex activity to the most complex.

Make changes to given sentences.
Combine a series of words as a sentence.	Writing skills developed
Write original sentences.

why structures combine ?

In addition to the illustrations of how structures combine to form sentences and to the exercises for practice, an Answer Key is provided at the end of the book. It includes not only the correct answers for the exercises but also sample sentences, with which you can compare your original sentences. Good sentence writing is not an impossible task, but it requires analysis and practice and a willingness to apply concepts and rules consistently. Let this book guide you, and you will discover a new confidence for writing more successfully in English.

Have fun and write well!

Chapter 2

Overview of Language Fundamentals

2.1 Declarative sentences and word order

what it is Declarative sentences and word order mean?

Declarative sentences are statements that convey information, facts, or opinions. They are the most common type of sentence in English and follow a specific word order structure:

- Subject + Predicate

The subject is the noun that performs the action, while the predicate is the verb or action itself. Together, they form an independent clause, which is necessary for a declarative sentence.

Some key points about declarative sentences and word order:

1. The subject always comes before the verb/predicate.
2. If there is a direct object, it comes directly after the verb.
3. Any other sentence elements like indirect objects, adverbs, or adverbial phrases have specific positions.
4. Declarative sentences always end with a period

While the basic word order is subject-verb-object, declarative sentences can have more complex structures with compound or complex clauses. But they always maintain the subject-predicate relationship and end with a period.

Declarative sentences in English consist of a subject and predicate. The verb in the predicate is conjugated appropriately for the subject and in a specific tense: subject + predicate

Mary + speaks English. Let's look at some examples that illustrate this. Declarative sentences can have a singular or plural noun as their subject and can be followed by a verb in any tense and by the complement of the sentence.

1. John repairs the car.
2. The boys ran into the forest.

Other declarative sentences use a pronoun as their subject, and again the tense of the sentence can vary.

1. She has never been to England.
2. We shall visit them soon.

singular-pronoun subject, present-perfect-tense verb plural-pronoun subject, future-tense verb. Since English verbs can show an incomplete action or one in progress (going) or a completed or habitual action (he goes), when changing tenses, have to conform to the type of action of the verb. For example: (he is you, he is going, he was going, he has been going, he goes, he went, he has gone.)

The conjugation of English verbs is, with few exceptions, a relatively simple matter, but using the proper tenses of verbs is something else. It is particularly important to understand the tense differences between verbs that describe an action in progress and verbs that describe a completed or habitual action.

2.1.1 Incomplete actions

Let's look at some sentences that illustrate the meaning of incomplete actions or ones in progress-in the present, past, and future tenses. Note that in some cases, it is an interruption of some kind that causes the action to be incomplete. (To the right of the examples are italicized clarifications that will help you fully understand the example sentences.)

1. Present tense

He is washing the car.	He has not finished. The car still has some dirty spots.
We are building a tree house.	The tree house is not yet finished.

2. Past tense

I was sleeping when he called.	I didn't finish my nap. His call interrupted my sleep.
The men were working in the mine but suddenly quit.	The work in the mine is unfinished, because the men quit.

3. Future tense

He will be playing in a rock band.	There is no apparent end to his job in the band.
Sarah will be needing more money.	There is no apparent end to Sarah's need for money.

2.1.2 Completed actions

Compare those examples with the following sentences that illustrate verbs that describe completed or habitual actions:

1. Present tense

He washes the car every Sunday.	His habit is to wash the car on Sunday.
They live in the capital.	Their regular place of residence is the capital.

2. Past tense

The puppy slept with me every night.	The puppy's habit was to sleep with me.
I worked in Mexico for five years.	My work for five years was in Mexico, I work elsewhere now.

3. Future tense

He will play a hymn for us on the piano.	He is going to play the hymn just once.
Uncle Bill will arrive today.	Uncle Bill will arrive today only once.

The perfect tenses conform to the same kinds of meanings.

For example:

1. Incomplete action or one in progress

- (a) He has been washing the car for three hours.
- (b) I had been sleeping in the den.
- (c) The men will have been working on it for twenty-four hours by tomorrow.

2. Completed or habitual action

- (a) They have lived here since June.
- (b) The pup had never slept so long before.
- (c) Uncle Bill will have arrived home by the time we get there.

Exercise 2.1.1 Rewrite the following declarative sentences in the missing tenses.

1. (a) Present
 (b) Past Thomas found the wallet.
 (c) Present perfect
 (d) Past perfect
 (e) Future
2. (a) Present The men are trying to raze the barn .
 (b) Past
 (c) Present perfect
 (d) Past perfect
 (e) Future
3. (a) Present
 (b) Past
 (c) Present perfect
 (d) Past perfect
 (e) Future They will drop by at two p.m.
4. (a) Present
 (b) Past
 (c) Present perfect
 (d) Past perfect She has been working here as a counselor.
 (e) Future
5. (a) Present
 (b) Past Thomas found the wallet.
 (c) Present perfect I have no time.
 (d) Past perfect

(e) Future

Exercise 2.1.2 Change the following sentences from actions in progress to completed or habitual actions. Add or remove words as needed to make sense. Keep the same tense as the original sentence.

Example:

- a Bill is still eating his breakfast.
- b Bill eats his breakfast at seven thirty a.m.
- 1. The attorneys were drawing up the contracts for the merger.
- 2. I will probably still be cooking when you arrive.
- 3. The boys will be sleeping in the little room in the attic.
- 4. I have been hoping for a long time to have a visit from you.
- 5. They had been sitting on the porch when the storm came up.

Follow the same directions, but change from completed or habitual actions to actions in progress.

- 6 We shall work even harder.
- 7 They traveled to Greece this year.
- 8 She cried when he left.
- 9 Bill and I often play catch in the backyard.
- 10 I hope the two boys will finally pass the test.

2.1.3 Recognizing tense from context

With certain verbs, it is the context of the sentence that tells you which tense is implied, because these verbs are identical, except for the third-person singular, in both the present and past tenses. Six such verbs are cut, put, let, set, quit, and read. Let's look at one of these verbs (cut) and how it is conjugated in the present and past tenses.

Present	I cut, you cut, he cuts, we cut, you cut, and they cut
Past	I cut, you cut, he cut, we cut, you cut, and they cut

As you can clearly see, it is only in the third person singular present tense (he cuts) where there is any difference between the present tense and past tense conjugations. Therefore, in order to know which tense is being used in a sentence, you must consider the context of the sentence. (Naturally, in the case of the verb read, there is a difference in the pronunciation of the two tenses. It is in their written form where the distinction must be made.)

adverbs act

Certain adverbs act as signals that tell whether these verbs are being used in the present or past tense, adverbs such as today, yesterday, and tomorrow. Remember that an English present tense can indicate the future tense; therefore, tomorrow is an appropriate signal for distinguishing the tense of these verbs. For example:

Present	He quits working here today.
Past	He quit yesterday after only five days on the job.
Future	He quits tomorrow after more than thirty years with us.

Let's look at some examples, in which the subject is not a third-person singular. Also keep in mind that other adverbial phrases and expressions can indicate the past or the future; for example: last year or next week. Other verbs in a sentence also signal the tense.

1. Present-tense verb as a tense signal

- (a) You are careless and always let the dog run away.
- (b) I get the dishes and set the table.
- (c) I find the right paragraph and read in a loud voice.

2. Past-tense verb or adverbial expression as a tense signal

- (a) He quit school when still a teenager.
- (b) The bread is stale because I cut it two days ago.
- (c) She opened the book and put on her glasses.

When these verbs describe an action in progress or are used with an auxiliary, there is no difficulty in determining the tense of the sentence. For example:

They were reading the newspaper.	past
The sun is setting.	present
I won't let this happen again!	Future

Exercise 2.1.3 In the space provided, write the tense of the sentence: present, past, or future.

- 1. She lets me borrow her notebook.
- 2. I read that novel back in high school.
- 3. The toddler cut his finger again.
- 4. The explorers set out on another journey last month.
- 5. She was putting on her dress when she fell. My brother quits a new job every few weeks.
- 6. No one read the article.
- 7. The judge put the thief in jail again.

8. Tomorrow I quit for sure!

9. We won't set foot in this restaurant ever again!

There are several other verbs that are identical in the present and past tenses. They are as follows:

Beat, hit, bet, Hurt, burst, rid, cast, Slit, cost, shed, Split, spread, thrust, Wet .

2.1.4 Types of complements

The complement of a declarative sentence can be an adjective, an adverb, a prepositional an object, or a combination of these elements.

Subject + predicate + adjective/adverb/prepositional phrase/object

Consider these examples with an adjective and an adverb

The children were noisy.	Adjective
His eyes blinked rapidly.	Adverb

The following examples illustrate a prepositional phrase and a direct Object:

Our relatives sat in the garden.	Prepositional phrase
I do not know Mr. Walker.	Direct object

The following example illustrates a combination of those elements. They approached the house. Combination of elements Cautiously from the rear.

Exercise 2.1.4 Using the verbs provided as cues, write original sentences in the tenses specified.

Example:

Buy / present habitual

He buys something new every day.

- 1. apply/present completed or habitual*
- 2. Suggest / present in progress or incomplete*
- 3. annoy / present perfect in progress or incomplete*
- 4. remain / future completed or habitual*
- 5. attempt / past in progress or incomplete*
- 6. trick / present perfect completed or habitual*
- 7. rub / past completed or habitual*
- 8. earn / future in progress or incomplete*
- 9. harvest / past perfect completed or habitual*
- 10. Lend / present perfect in progress or incomplete*

Exercise 2.1.5 Complete the following sentences twice with the type of complement specified.

Example:

adverb or adverbial phrase

The men had to work slowly.

The men had to work every day.

1. adverb or adverbial phrase

(a) Tina wrote him

(b) Tina wrote him

2. Prepositional phrase

(a) James chatted.

(b) James chatted.

3. Direct object

(a) Dad wanted to sell

(b) Dad wanted to sell

4. direct and indirect object

(a) Bob sent

(b) Bob sent

5. Adjective

(a) She was always

(b) She was always

6. ways combination of elements

(a) Mary drove

(b) Mary drove

7. adverb or adverbial phrase

(a) She was practicing

(b) She was practicing

8. prepositional phrase

(a) I met him

(b) I met him

9. direct and indirect object

(a) I will give

(b) I will give

10. combination of elements

(a) The soldiers ran

(b) The soldiers ran

2.1.5 Placing emphasized elements first

In order to emphasize a specific element (such as an adverb or prepositional phrase) in a declarative sentence, it is possible to place that element ahead of the subject. The positions of the other elements of the sentence (subject, verb, predicate) do not change.

Emphasized element + subject + predicate + complement

Emphasized elements tend to tell when or how often something is done (usually, ordinarily, in the winter, today, during summer vacation). For example:

They went to a concert yesterday.	Yesterday they went to a concert.
He brushes his teeth every morning.	Every morning he brushes his teeth.
The girls play chess in the evening.	In the evening the girls play chess.

If a long prepositional phrase is the first element of a sentence, it is common to separate it from the rest of the sentence by a comma. For example: Without looking back at his parents, John quickened his pace and turned the corner.

After hearing the good news, Mary embraced Bill and kissed him. Commas can also be used to separate a highly emphasized adverb from the rest of the sentence:

Truthfully, I really never saw the accident happen.

Exercise 2.1.6 Begin each sentence that follows with four different adverbs or prepositional phrases.

Example: Today she finally felt well again.

After a long illness, she finally felt well again.

Incredibly, she finally felt well again.

Happily, she finally felt well again.

1. (a) Granddad arrived soaking wet.
 (b) Granddad arrived soaking wet.
 (c) Granddad arrived soaking wet.
 (d) Granddad arrived soaking wet.
2. (a) I spent too much money.
 (b) I spent too much money.
 (c) I spent too much money.
 (d) I spent too much money.
3. (a) his son had learned a serious lesson.
 (b) his son had learned a serious lesson.
 (c) his son had learned a serious lesson.
 (d) his son had learned a serious lesson.
4. (a) we will go sightseeing in Madrid.
 (b) we will go sightseeing in Madrid.
 (c) we will go sightseeing in Madrid.

- (d) we will go sightseeing in Madrid.
5. (a) their village was completely destroyed.
- (b) their village was completely destroyed.
- (c) their village was completely destroyed.
- (d) their village was completely destroyed.

Using negatives

Declarative sentences do not have to make positive statements. They can be negated by using of a variety of negative words: no, not, not any, none, nothing, no one, never, nowhere, nobody. Let's look at an example with each of these negative words:

1. I have no time for this now.
2. You are not allowed to smoke here.
3. She does not want any contact with you.
4. None of the contestants knew the answer.
5. I have nothing more to say to you.
6. He spoke to no one about it.
7. They never really expected to win the lottery.
8. There's nowhere I'd rather live than right here.
9. Nobody saw the burglar enter the house.

Except with the verb to be, a form of do is used when negating a verb with not. A form of any will precede the object of the verb. If a form of no is used as the negative, do is not required. Compare the following sentences:

1. I want no money from you. $\mapsto$ I do not want any money from you.
2. Tom has no time. $\mapsto$ Tom does not have any time.
3. There is no one here to help me. $\mapsto$ There is not anyone here to help me.

The forms of no and any are as follows: No, not any, no one, nobody, not anyone, Not anybody, nowhere, not anywhere, nothing, not, anything. A form of no or a form of not any can be used to replace one another.

a form of no $\mapsto$ a form of do not + a form of any

I have no money. $\mapsto$ I do not have any money.

A form of do is used only with the negation of verbs in the present and past tenses. With modal auxiliaries or auxiliaries of the perfect and future tenses, avoid do.

1. She could do no better. $\mapsto$ She could not do any better.
2. The boy has caused no problems. $\mapsto$ The boy has not caused any problems.
3. Mr. Cole will accept no excuses. $\mapsto$ Mr. Cole will not accept any excuses.

Auxiliary

Auxiliary with a form of no = auxiliary with not + a form of any
I will buy no gifts. $\mapsto$ I will not buy any gifts.

Exercise 2.1.7 Rewrite each sentence with a form of not any. Retain the tense of the original sentence.

Example:

The teacher found no errors. The teacher did not find any errors.

1. John could take no one's advice.
2. I will accept nothing but excellence.
3. There is nowhere for you to hide.
4. Ms. Brooks spoke with nobody about the problem.
5. You should give no one so young that kind of responsibility.
6. That will take no time at all.
7. There is nothing else that I want to say.
8. There was no one for him to turn to
9. My parents had found no place to spend the night.
10. They will achieve nothing from their efforts.

2.2 Interrogative sentences

what it is Interrogative sentences mean?

Interrogative sentences are questions that seek information, clarification, or confirmation. They are designed to elicit a response from the listener or reader. Interrogative sentences typically follow a specific structure and word order that distinguishes them from declarative sentences.

- Key Features of Interrogative Sentences

- Question Formation: Interrogative sentences often begin with a question word (e.g., who, what, where, when, why, how) or an auxiliary verb (e.g., is, are, do, can, will).
- Word Order: The typical word order for yes/no questions is inverted, meaning the auxiliary verb comes before the subject.
- Wh- Questions: When using question words, the structure usually follows the pattern of question word + auxiliary verb + subject + main verb.
- Ending Punctuation: Interrogative sentences always end with a question mark (?).

Interrogative sentences are essential for communication, allowing individuals to gather information, clarify doubts, and engage in conversations.

There are two types of interrogative sentences, and both types ask questions. The first type can be called a yes no question, because the answer to such a question will begin with the affirmative word yes or the negative word no. Most questions of this type begin with a form of the auxiliary verb do.

Auxiliary + subject + verb + predicate +?
Do + you + have + the books +?

If the verb in a yes-no question is the verb to be or the verb to have, the question is formed simply by placing the verb before the subject of the sentence.

To be/to have + subject + predicate +?
Is + she + the new student +?

This occurs in any tense. In the case of the perfect tenses or the future tense, it is the auxiliary of the verbs to be and to have that precede the subject. For example:

Present	Is she aware of the problem?
Past	Was there enough time to finish the exam?
Present perfect	Have you been here before?
Future	Will Professor Burns be today's lecturer again?
Present	Have you enough money for the tickets?
Past	Had he adequate notice.
Present perfect	has your mother had the operation yet?
Future	Will the workers have some time off

Auxiliaries

This kind of question structure, in which the verb precedes the subject, also occurs With numerous auxiliaries, such as the following:
be able to, ought to, can, could, have, must, shall/will, should, would

Auxiliary + subject + verb form + predicate+?
Should + we help + them +?

Let's look at some example sentences:

1. Are you able to make out her signature?
2. Have you worked here for very long?
3. Ought she to have said that to her mother?

Notice in each example that the sentence contains a second verb. The initial verb is an auxiliary, and it is followed by an infinitive (such as to work) or by an elliptical infinitive, which omits the particle word (to); for example: are you able to make, will you try, With most auxiliaries, it is the tense of the auxiliary that determines the "time" of the action; for example: present (can he speak) and past (could he speak).

With the auxiliary have, however, its tense conjugation combined with a past participle (and not an infinitive) identifies the tense as either present perfect, past perfect, or future perfect:

Present perfect:	has he spoken
Past perfect:	had he spoken
Future perfect:	will he have spoken

The auxiliaries shall, will identify the future tense, and are followed by elliptical

Infinitives

1. Shall I get you something for dinner?
2. Will you be staying the night?

In declarative sentences, most English speakers use will, although technically, shall should be used with singular and plural pronouns in the first person, and will should be used with the second and third persons. In questions, the rule is applied more strictly: shall with first-person singular and plural, and will with second- and third-persons singular and plural.

	Singular	Plural
First	Shall I turn on the TV?	Shall we go to the movies tonight?
Second	Tom, will you help me with this?	Boys, will you please stop your arguing?
Third	Will she like this dress?	Will they be able to spend some time with us?

It is important to be knowledgeable about the other auxiliaries and how they function various tenses. Let's focus on two that can be conjugated like other verbs and form placing the conjugated verb or its auxiliaries before the subject: in the Questions by

1. Present Is she able to stand alone?
2. Past Was she able to stand alone?
3. Present perfect Has she been able to stand alone?
4. Future Will she be able to stand alone?
5. Present Have you a few extra dollars?
6. Past Had you a few extra dollars?
7. Present perfect Have you had a few extra dollars?
8. Future Will you have a few extra dollars?

Compare to be able to and have with the following auxiliaries and what occurs with them in the various tenses:

- Can changes to be able to
 - Present Can Victor understand the problem?
 - Past Could Victor understand the problem?
 - Present perfect Has Victor been able to understand the problem?
 - Future Will Victor be able to understand the problem?
- Ought to changes to ought to have
 - Present Ought you to speak so harshly?
 - Past Ought to is not used in a past-tense question.
 - Present perfect Ought you to have spoken so harshly?

- Future Ought to is not used in a future-tense question
- Must changes to have to
 - Present Must he live alone?
 - Past Did he have to live alone?
 - Present perfect Has he had to live alone?
 - Future Will he have to live alone?
- Should changes to should have
 - Present Should they argue so much?
 - Past Should is not used in a pestilence question.
 - Present perfect Should they have argued so much?
 - Future Should is not used in a future tense question.

2.2.1 Questions with do/did

Verbs that are not auxiliaries form questions by beginning them in the present tense with do and in the past tense with did. The use of do/did does not occur in the other tenses. Let's examine a few cases in point:

1. Present Do you enjoy her classes?
2. Past Did you enjoy her classes?
3. Present perfect Have you enjoyed her classes?
4. Future Will you enjoy her classes?
5. Present Does Thomas visit you often?
6. Past Did Thomas visit you often?
7. Present perfect Has Thomas visited you often.
8. Future Will Thomas visit you often?

Since have is an auxiliary, it can be used in questions without do/did. Nevertheless, a tendency to add the extra do/did auxiliary both in speech and in writing. there is

1. Present Do you have a few extra dollars?
2. Past Did you have a few extra dollars?
3. Present perfect Have you had a few extra dollars?
4. Future Will you have a few extra dollars?

When using have to (which is much the same as must in meaning), you must use do/did in the present and past tenses.

1. Present Do they have to work so many hours?
2. Past Did they have to work so many hours?

3. Present perfect Have they had to work so many hours?
4. Future Will they have to work so many hours?

The auxiliaries to want to and to like to form their present- and past-tense questions with do/did. For example:

1. Present: Does Mom want to go shopping?
2. Past: Did Mom want to go shopping?
3. Present perfect: Has Mom wanted to go shopping?
4. Future: Will Mom want to go shopping?
5. Present: Do they like to listen to rap music?
6. Past: Did they like to listen to rap music?
7. Present perfect: Have they liked to listen to rap music?
8. Future: Will they like to listen to rap music?

You should be aware that while both to want to and to like to are auxiliary verbs, they are also used as transitive verbs, taking a direct object. When they are used as transitive verbs, the final to is omitted from the verb: to want and to like. Even when used as transitive verbs, they form their present- and past-tense questions with do/did.

do/did + subject + want/like + predicate +?
Does + she + like + him +?

1. Present: Do you want some help? /Does she like pizza?
2. Past: Did you want some help?/ Did she like pizza?

Exercise 2.2.1 Rewrite the following questions in the missing tenses.

1. (a) Present:
(b) Past:
(c) Present perfect:
(d) Future: Will you be home for the holidays?
2. (a) Present:
(b) Past: Did the arsonist burn down the bank?
(c) Present perfect:
(d) Future:
3. (a) Present:
(b) Past:
(c) Present perfect: Have you had to spend a lot of time studying?

(d) Future:

4. (a) Present:

(b) Past:

(c) Present perfect: Have the workers done the job right?

(d) Future:

5. (a) Present: Can you really predict the outcome of the election?

(b) Past:

(c) Present perfect:

(d) Future:

Exercise 2.2.2 Write original questions with the following auxiliaries in the tense shown in parentheses. Example:

Can (past): could you see over the tall hedge?

1. should (present perfect)

2. Must (present)

3. Want to (future)

4. Have to (present)

5. Have (future)

6. be able to (present)

7. Will (future)

8. ought to (present perfect)

9. Would (present)

10. Must (present perfect)

Exercise 2.2.3 Using the phrases provided, first form a yes no question. Then change the question by adding any appropriate auxiliary. Example:
to walk to work

Do you always walk to work?

Do you always have to walk to work?

1. To spend more than a hundred dollars.

(a)

(b)

2. to arrive in the capital on time.

(a)

(b)

3. to develop a new method.

(a)

(b)

4. to remain calm.

(a)

(b)

5. to consider the danger.

(a)

(b)

6. to spell accurately .

8. to suggest a solution.

(a)

(b)

9. to flee the storm.

(a)

(b)

10. to pretend nothing is wrong.

(a)

2.2.2 Progressive-form questions

Just as in a declarative sentence, verbs in a question can be formed in the progressive, which means that they are actions in progress or incomplete. Since the progressive form is composed of a conjugation of to be plus a present participle (is going, was singing), and to be never forms a question with do/did, all questions that have a progressive verb will begin with the verb to be or its auxiliaries.

to be + subject + present participle (-ing) +?

Are + you + working in the garden +?

For example:

1. Present: Are you planning on attending the party?
2. Past: Was she sleeping when the storm hit?
3. Present perfect: Have the men been working in the mine again?
4. Future: Will he be preparing for final exams?

Be aware that a verb in a do/did question will not require the auxiliary do/did when it changed to its progressive form. For example:

1. Do you attend a state university?
2. Are you attending a state university?
3. Did the campers sleep in tents?
4. Were the campers sleeping in tents?

Exercise 2.2.4 Change each of the following sentences to a question, Then, in a second question, change the verb to the progressive form, Be sure to retain the tense of the original sentence.

Example:

Bill learned shorthand.

Did Bill learn shorthand?

Was Bill learning shorthand?

1. A plumber fixed the leaking pipes.
2. You couldn't work on that old car.
3. The judges have spoken about this for a long time.
4. Time goes by very fast.
5. Thunder rolled across the foothills.
6. You will take a series of exams.
7. Mr. Kelly has wanted to vacation there.
8. He's crazy.
9. The revelers have had a good time at the celebration..
10. I should sit nearer to her.

2.2.3 Questions using interrogative words

The second kind of question formation is one that begins with an interrogative word: who, what, why, how, which, or when. The rules that apply about the use of do/did in questions apply in the same way with questions that begin with an interrogative word. For example:

1. Can he understand you?
2. Do you like that man?
3. Are you coming to the party?
4. How can he understand you?
5. Why do you like that man?
6. When are you coming to the party?
7. Have you found the books?
8. Where have you found the books?

As you can see from these examples, yes-no questions and questions that begin with an interrogative word can be, for the most part, identical. Likewise, the choice of do/did in a question is the same in either type of question. This is possible because the interrogatives illustrated in the four examples are substitutes for adverbs, and since adverbs only modify, changes are not always needed in a question.

This is not the case, however, with who and what. These two interrogatives are actually pronouns that stand in place of a subject or an object in a sentence. In the following examples, an arrow (-) points out how a declarative sentence is changed to an interrogative sentence with who or what. For example:

1. Subject: The man is sick. $\mapsto$ Who is sick?
2. Subject: A box is needed. $\mapsto$ What is needed?
3. Object: They met the woman. $\mapsto$ Whom did they meet?
4. Object: She broke the lamp. $\mapsto$ What did she break?
5. Object: I spoke with him. $\mapsto$ With whom did I speak?
6. Object: The boy sat on it. $\mapsto$ On what did the boy sit?

In less formal style, who is often substituted for whom. This occurs even in writing, although in formal writing the appropriate use of whom should be applied. Also, the placing of a preposition in front of whom or what is formal in style. In a less formal version, prepositions are placed at the end of the question and would look like this:

1. Who did you speak with?
2. What did the boy sit on?

If a possessive of who or what is required, use whose or of what.

1. I spoke with Tom's father.

2. With whose father did you speak?
3. The color of the book is red.
4. Whose color is red? (The color of what is red?)

Exercise 2.2.5 Use the underlined cue provided to determine which interrogative word applies; then write. The appropriate question for the sentence.

Example:

John is a fantastic soccer player.

Who is a fantastic soccer player?

1. The attendant closed and locked the gates at seven sharp.
2. They leave for Puerto Rico at the beginning of every February.
3. Life is not always easy to understand.
4. Ms. Perez's two puppies got their shots today.
5. They probably caught the flu from the boy who coughed through the lecture.
6. We plan to get to the match on the subway.
7. That big bully threw the ball on the other side of the fence.
8. The girls should come home right after the end of the movie.
9. Andrea has a crush on the blond boy.
10. They know about the change in plans, because they received a fax from him today.

Exercise 2.2.6 Write original sentences with the interrogatives provided.

1. Why
2. How
3. Whom
4. Which
5. When

The interrogative

The interrogative how is often combined with other words to form new interrogatives. Some of these are how much, how many, how often, how old, how long, and how tall. In tenses, they are used like these just sentences

1. How much does that magazine cost?
2. How often do the girls work out?
3. How long did you have to wait to see the doctor?
4. How tall is the center on the basketball team?

Exercise 2.2.7 Form original questions with how by combining it with the cues provided. Then Appropriate answer to the question. give an

Example:

many How many players are there on a football team?

There are eleven players on a football team.

1. Little
2. Large
3. Frequently
4. Difficult
5. Hot
6. Strong
7. Often

2.3 Questions and answers

In the previous chapter, you dealt with the types of questions that exist and how they are formed in the various tenses and with various auxiliaries. In this chapter, you will analyze the various elements of sentences to determine what kind of question is required by those elements.

2.3.1 Questions about all the information in a sentence

For starters, if you ask a question about an entire sentence and are not seeking specific information about a part of that sentence, you will ask a yes-no question.

entire sentence $\mapsto$ yes-no question

Let us assume that you wish to ask about all the information in the following sentence:

1. John is the brother-in-law of the new mayor. The question for this complete sentence is a yes-no question:

(a) Is John the brother-in-law of the new mayor?

The possible answers are as follows:

b Yes, John is the brother-in-law of the new mayor.

c No, John isn't the brother-in-law of the new mayor.

Let's look at a couple more examples of questions that inquire into all the information in a sentence:

1. The new cruise ship will be one of the largest in the world.

(a) Will the new cruise ship be one of the largest in the world?

(b) Yes, the new cruise ship will be one of the largest in the world.

(c) or No, the new cruise ship won't be one of the largest in the world.

2. My daughter had a baby last month.

(a) Did your daughter have a baby last month?

(b) Yes, my daughter had a baby last month.

(c) or No, my daughter didn't have a baby last month.

Exercise 2.3.1 Write a yes-no question for each of the following statements. Retain the tense of the original statement. Then answer each question once with yes and once with no. Following the no response, provide an original positive response.

Example:

She spoke with him yesterday.

Did she speak with him yesterday?

Yes, she spoke with him yesterday.

No, she didn't speak with him yesterday. She spoke with him today.

1. The conductor of the orchestra studied music in New York.

(a)

(b)

(c)

2. The discovery of the New World changed the world forever

(a)

(b)

(c)

3. There are numerous species of birds of prey in this region.

(a)

(b)

(c)

4. The hatchlings suffered during the cold weather.

(a)

(b)

(c)

5. My cousin in Cleveland won the lottery.

(a)

(b)

(c)

6. The performance is supposed to start at eight P.M.

(a)

(b)

(c)

7. The operation was a total success.

(a)

(b)

(c)

8. Mr. Keller's niece has great artistic ability.

(a)

(b)

(c)

9. Outdoor concerts are given on Mondays and Fridays.

(a)

(b)

(c)

10. The toddler fell asleep on the floor.

(a)

(b)

(c)

Questions about specific parts of a sentence

When you seek information about only a portion of a sentence, you should not use a yes-no question. Instead, an interrogative word is used that identifies the part of the sentence about which you are inquiring.

question about a specific part of a sentence $\mapsto$ interrogative word

Take note that nearly every element in a sentence can be the object of a question posed by an interrogative word. Let's look at how many questions can be derived from the following single sentence: Andrew Jackson came to fame after his victory at the battle of New Orleans. Here are some possible questions:

1. Who came to fame after his victory at the battle of New Orleans?
2. What happened to Andrew Jackson after his victory at the battle of New Orleans?
3. When did Andrew Jackson come to fame?
4. Why did Andrew Jackson come to fame?
5. In what city did Andrew Jackson come to fame after his victory there?
6. At what battle did Andrew Jackson come to fame?
7. After what event did Andrew Jackson come to fame?

And of course, a yes no question can be asked about the information in the entire sentence: Did Andrew Jackson come to fame after his victory at the battle of New Orleans?

2.3.2 Placing prepositions in an interrogative phrase

When you ask a question about the information in a prepositional phrase, the preposition must be included in the question. Its position in the question varies and is dependent on the tone of the question: is it formal or informal? In writing, the formal form tends to be preferred. Let's look at some prepositional phrases and how they are formed in questions:

Prepositional phrase	Interrogative
It was hidden in a box.	In what was it hidden?	formal
	What was it hidden in?	informal
The letters were from him.	From whom were the letters?	formal
	Who were the letters from?	informal
They spoke about the war.	About what did they speak?	formal
	What did they speak about?	informal
The dog waits for the boy.	For whom does the dog wait?	formal
	Who does the dog wait for?	informal

When a prepositional phrase indicates a location or a destination, the interrogative where can usually replace a preposition and an interrogative. For example:

It is most common to use where in questions that inquire into location or destination, but a preposition and an interrogative can be used if you want to be precise or specific. If someone is returning from a place, where and from are used to form the question.

Prepositional phrase
They hid in the barn.	In what did they hide?
	What did they hide in?
	Where did they hide?
The cat slept under the sofa.	Under what did the cat sleep?
	What did the cat sleep under?
	Where did the cat sleep?
I traveled to Venice.	To what city did you travel?
	What city did you travel to?
	Where did you travel?

He just got back from Iraq.	Where did he just get back from?
Mom returned from the store.	Where did Mom return from?

Exercise 2.3.2 Write a separate question for each of the underlined elements in the following sentences.

Example:

The old house was covered in vines.

What was covered in vines?

In what was the old house covered?

2.4 Imperatives

what it is Imperatives?

Imperatives are sentences that give commands, instructions, or requests. They are used to direct someone to perform a specific action and can vary in tone from polite requests to strong commands. Here are the key features of imperative sentences:

- Form:

Imperative sentences typically begin with the base form of a verb (the infinitive form without "to"). The subject is often implied rather than explicitly stated, usually understood as "you." For example:

(You) Close the door.

(You) Please sit down.

- Tone:

The tone of an imperative can range from polite to forceful. Adding words like "please" can soften the command: Please pass the salt. (polite)
Stop talking! (forceful)

- Negative Imperatives:

To give a negative command, the word "do not" or "don't" is used before the verb: Don't touch that!

Do not enter. Ending Punctuation: Imperative sentences typically end with a period (.) or an exclamation mark (!) depending on the strength of the command.

Imperatives, or commands, are as important in good sentence writing as any other grammatical element. It is essential to differentiate among the various types of imperatives in order to use them appropriately and effectively.

You as the subject of an imperative

Most imperatives are made to the second-person singular or plural (you), although the pronoun is not stated.

imperative form of a verb + predicate = command

Certain gruff or impolite-sounding imperatives cannot be used in every situation. Some of these are said in a casual manner, while others are said in anger or out of belligerence. For example:

Shut up!, Be quiet!, Don't ever do that again!, Hurry up!, Shut your mouth!
Let go!, The exclamation point, Get out!, Don't ever say that again! Stop it!
Leave me alone!, Give me that!, Beat it!

2.4.1 The exclamation point

Most imperatives of this nature are punctuated with an exclamation point, but imperatives can also be punctuated with a period. An exclamation point in writing is a signal that the imperative is stated with great emphasis. For example:

1. Stand up! empathic, perhaps angry in tone
2. Stand up. Milder but still casual and a bit gruff in tone

Other short imperatives can be written with an exclamation point when they are pleas or urgent requests. For example:

Have a heart!, Stand back!, Be patient!, Keep moving!, Don't joke about that!, Don't excite the dog!, Hold on tight!, Make some room for me!

Exercise 2.4.1 Respond to each incident described with a gruff or angry imperative.

1. Someone approaches you menacingly and says, "I'm going to get you."
2. Someone has unlocked your diary and is reading through it.
3. Someone continues to refuse to leave your home.
4. Someone is acting foolishly and is teasing you.
5. Someone is packing a suitcase slowly although the hour of departure is near.
6. Someone is pestering you and making you annoyed.

Follow the same directions, but respond with a plea or an urgent request.

- 7 A child is leaning down to pet a vicious dog.
- 8 You're riding fast on a motorcycle and you tell your passenger to be careful.
- 9 You are thirsty and would like a soft drink.
- 10 You feel that someone should be kinder.

2.4.2 Use Please

Please is written at the end of an imperative, as in the example just shown, a comma precedes it. Here are more examples:

1. Please sign here.
2. Please fill out this form.
3. Please fasten your seat belts.
4. Sign here, please.
5. Fill out this form, please.
6. Fasten your seat belts, please.

Most imperatives are usually said with a certain amount of courtesy. The inclusion of please softens the tone of the command. Certainly, please wait here sounds nicer than wait here. Therefore, it is wise to include the word please in most commands. However, its position in a sentence and the addition or lack of a comma can change the general meaning of the sentence significantly. If an imperative begins with please, it has the same meaning as when it ends with please.

please + imperative verb + predicate Please + lend + me a dollar.
imperative verb + predicate + please Lend + me a dollar+, please.

A comma placed after an initial please changes the courteous meaning to one that suggests impatience or exasperation. In speech, the word please would be followed by a pause before the imperative is given. In writing, the pause is indicated by a comma.

Courteous	Impatient
Please keep back from the fire.	Please, keep back from the fire.
Please don't feed the animals.	Please, don't feed the animals,
Please move along quickly.	Please, move along quickly.

If the imperative is meant to show impatience or exasperation, it can be punctuated with an exclamation point:

Exercise 2.4.2 Using the cue word provided, write an imperative sentence twice, beginning it once with please and ending it once with please.

Example:

stay Please stay in your room,
Stay in your room, please.

1. enjoy

(a)

(b)

2. find

(a)

(b)

3. remember

(b)

8. Join

9. follow

(b)

10. hurry

(b)

2.4.3 Let's and let

While most imperatives are said to the second-person-singular or second-person-plural pronoun you, some can include the person giving the command. Imperatives of this type begin with the contraction let's (let us) and are followed by an infinitive phrase. Infinitive phrases that follow let's omit the particle word to. Let's conveys that the person giving the command will participate in the action of the command; for example, Let's listen to some music. In this sentence, the speaker suggests that you listen to some music, and the speaker will join you in that activity. Let's is the contraction of let us, but the uncontracted form is used less often.

Let's and Let

let's + infinitive phrase $\mapsto$ Let's + go home.

Here are a few more examples:

1. Let's take a look at that scratch on your arm.
2. Let's work on a new way of blocking unwanted e-mails
3. Let's see what's on today's agenda.

If the verb let is used without the contraction of us (let's), it still is an imperative, but it has a different meaning. In this case, the person giving the command is suggesting that "you" allow someone or something to perform an action. The structure consists of let followed by a direct object and an infinitive phrase with the particle word to omitted.

let + direct object + infinitive phrase
Let+them+sleep until ten.

For example:

1. Let John help you with the project.
2. Let me know whether you need more time for the job.
3. Let the problem just go away.

4. Let the soldiers find some shade and get a little rest.

Exercise 2.4.3 Rewrite the following sentences as an imperative with let's. Then, after adding an appropriate direct object, rewrite the imperative with let.

Example:

You drove Maria to the bus station.

Let's drive Maria to the bus station.

Let Henry drive Maria to the bus station.

1. You spent about two hundred dollars.

(a)

(b)

2. You were talking to Jim on the phone.

(a)

(b)

3. You should send them another e-mail.

(a)

(b)

4. You report the burglary to the police

(a)

(b)

5. You have repaired the rickety steps.

(a)

(b)

6. You tried to signal the boat struggling in the swift current.

(a)

(b)

7. You will send for the paramedics.

(a)

(b)

8. You drove to the edge of the cliff.

(a)

(b)

9. You have to put up a privacy fence.

(a)

(b)

10. You solve the difficult equation.

(a)

(b)

How about

Another version of an imperative appears in the form of a question. It begins with the phrase how about and is followed by a gerund and its complement. This kind of imperative sounds more like a suggestion than a command, and since it is in the form of a question, it gives the impression that it is no command at all. Also, it includes the command giver in the action. Let's peruse some examples:

1. How about going to the movies tonight?
2. How about having dinner at the Bella Luna Cafe?
3. How about giving me a hand with this heavy chest?

Why don't you

Yet another version of an imperative also appears in the form of a question. It begins with why don't you and is followed by an infinitive phrase. Unlike imperatives with how about, this imperative does not include the command giver in the action of the verb.

1. Why don't you go out and play for a while?
2. Why don't you get dressed and come down for breakfast?
3. Why don't you think about what you just said?

If you change the pronoun

you to we in this imperative, the command giver is now included in the action of the verb. For example:

1. Why don't we try to get along a little better?
2. Why don't we set a trap for that pesky raccoon?
3. Why don't we take a little trip downtown and do some shopping?

Exercise 2.4.4 *Using each infinitive phrase provided, form three imperative sentences: one with how about, one with why don't you, and one with *why don't we

Example:

to speak to him about it

How about speaking to him about it?

Why don't you speak to him about it?

Why don't we speak to him about it?

1. to sit down under a shady tree

(a)

(b)

(c)

2. to come to an understanding about this matter

(a)

(b)

(c)

3. to let them work it out for themselves

(a)

(b)

(c)

4. to grant her permission to take the trip

(a)

(b)

(c)

5. to sing a song for Grandma

(a)

(b)

(c)

6. to refrain from using such language

(a)

(b)

(c)

7. to fertilize the fields with dung

(a)

(b)

(c)

8. to open a business on State Street

(a)

(b)

(c)

9. to register to vote in the next election

(a)

(b)

(c)

10. to try to behave a little better

(a)

(b)

(c)

Exercise 2.4.5 Using the cues provided write original imperative sentences.

1. please.

2. let's

3. let

4. Please, !

5. how about

6. why don't you

7. spend more time

8. work out

9. Please keep

10. why don't

2.5 Coordinating and correlative conjunctions

Conjunctions are used to combine words, phrases, or clauses. The two major types of conjunctions are coordinating conjunctions and correlative conjunctions.

Coordinating conjunctions word + conjunction + word phrase + conjunction + phrase clause + conjunction + clause

Coordinating conjunctions are some of the most commonly used conjunctions. They include and, but, or, nor, for, so, and yet. The conjunctions and and or can be used to connect words, phrases, and clauses. For example:

1. John and Mary became engaged last night.
2. Working in a factory and working in a mine are both hard work.
3. Uncle Jake is snoozing on the couch, and Aunt Sue is working in the kitchen.
4. Do you want a hot dog or a hamburger?
5. Did they go fishing or hiking out in the forest?
6. We could take a trip to Canada, or we could save more money and go to Europe.

The other coordinating conjunctions are used primarily to combine clauses, and those clauses are separated by a comma. Let's look at some examples: You say you love me, but you never hold me anymore.

1. She doesn't believe in me, nor does she understand my goals for myself.
2. Yes, I committed the crime, for there was no other way out for me.
3. We're out of money, so we've come to you for a loan.
4. I want you to go on this trip, yet I worry that you're really not old enough.

In some cases, it is possible to make the second clause "elliptical"—that is, omit a portion of the clause that is understood. This can occur if the subjects of the two clauses are identical. For example:

1. We could take a trip to Canada or save more money and go to Europe.
2. You say you love me but never hold me anymore.
3. She doesn't believe in me nor understand my goals for myself.
4. I want you to go on the trip yet worry that you're really not old enough.

When the second clause is elliptical, the comma separating the two clauses is usually omitted. In certain cases, a comma can be used to avoid confusion.

Exercise 2.5.1 With the conjunction provided in parentheses, use the set of cue words to form two clauses of a sentence. Use the same subject in the two clauses. Then rewrite the sentence with the second clause in its elliptical form.

Example:

(and) look for/treasure/hidden/cabin/ hope/become/rich

We were looking for a treasure hidden in the old cabin, and we were hoping to become rich from the discovery.

We were looking for a treasure hidden in the old cabin and hoping to become rich from the discovery.

1. (and) during vacation/spend/seashore/snorkeling/beautiful fish

(a)

(b)

2. (but) attend/reception/candidate/become ill/stay home

(a)

(b)

3. (or) stay/city/travel/Mexico/visit/relatives

(a)

(b)

4. (nor) care for /ideas/about/trust/judgment/about

(a)

(b)

5. (and) tell lies/about/ruin/friendship/with

(a)

(b)

6. (yet) give/opportunity/work/concern/lack skill/maturity

(a)

(b)

Exercise 2.5.2 Write an appropriate completion for each of the following sentences.

1. The lawyers met for hours behind closed doors, but

2. Can you spend the weekend with us in Miami, or

3. The soldiers were sweating from the intense heat, for

4. You've really bungled this project, so

5. The dean has authorized a scholarship for her, yet

6. _____ but we continued on our journey as though nothing were wrong

7. _____ or we might have to sell our house.

8. _____ for an honest man doesn't have to explain himself.

9. so the investors decided to rely on his judgment.
10. yet there still is room for doubt.

Exercise 2.5.3 Write original sentences with the conjunctions provided.

1. or
2. nor
3. for
4. so
5. yet

Correlative conjunctions

Correlative conjunctions are pairs of words that function together to combine other words or phrases in a sentence. The words in the pairs of conjunctions cannot be separated and used alone; to have the intended meaning, they must be used together. The following pairs are used as correlative conjunctions: as/as, both/and, either/or, hardly/when, if/then, neither/nor, no sooner/ than, not only/ but also, rather/ than, scarcely/when, and whether/ or.

Standard forms

The correlative conjunctions can combine two subjects to form a compound subject. They can link two direct objects or two verb phrases. They can even combine two complete clauses. The following sentences illustrate combined subjects:

1. Both Frank and his brother worked in their father's shop.
2. Either the weather or the bad road caused the accident.

These example sentences illustrate combined clauses:

1. I had hardly begun to speak when the power went out.
2. If you are going to argue with me, (then) I'm going to leave.
3. He is as good an athlete as he is a (good) student.

In the following sentence, neither/nor combines two objects: You have neither a driver's license nor the skill to drive a car. The following example illustrates combined verb phrases:

We would rather play soccer than go for a run.

The conjunction pair whether/ or combines two phrases or clauses.

1. Has she decided whether to take one suitcase or two?
2. His interest in music was dependent upon whether he was listening to a favorite song or was being forced to practice the violin.

It is common to omit then from the correlative pair if/then, because its meaning is understood.

1. If it rains, we'll stay home.

2. or If it rains, we'll stay home.

When using whether/or, you can combine two clauses or phrases. The clause following or can be elliptical because its meaning is understood. I don't know whether to go on a diet or not (to go on a diet).

Exercise 2.5.4 Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate phrase.

1. The little girl is as sweet as
2. Both Laura and Jane
3. No sooner had she left my apartment
4. You should either get up early or
5. If what you say is true,
6. No sooner had Tom said, "I love you," than
7. Have you decided whether to
8. Scarcely had I opened my eyes, when
9. No sooner than Joe showed up.
10. nor any interest in this project.

2.5.1 Singular or Plural Verb

When certain correlative conjunctions combine two subjects, it is the subject closer to the verb that determines whether the verb will have a singular or a plural ending. For example:

1. Neither John nor his brother has a girlfriend right now. Neither John nor his sisters have ever gone abroad.
2. It is either Bill or his friend who speaks German. singular
3. It is either Bill or his friends who speak German. plural

In the case of the correlative conjunction both/and, the conjunction and tells you that a compound subject is formed, and therefore the verb will always be a plural.

1. Both Mary and her sister are taking ballet. singular
2. Both Mary and her three sisters are taking ballet. plural

Exercise 2.5.5 Write original sentences with the correlative conjunctions provided. Include the cue word in parentheses in each of your sentences.

Example:

both/and (wolf)

Both a wolf and a coyote prey on smaller animals.

1. either/or (diplomat)
2. neither/nor (famous)
3. if/then (war)

4. not only/but also (careless)
5. hardly/when (roof)
6. as/as (playful)
7. whether/or (to study)
8. scarcely/when (snake)
9. rather/than (run away)
10. no sooner/than (bear)

Exercise 2.5.6 Using the cues provided, write complete sentences. If part of a correlative conjunction is provided, include the missing part in your sentence.

Example:

both Both Tom and Laura speak fluent French.

1. and
2. for
3. but
4. so
5. either
6. not only
7. no sooner
8. rather
9. scarcely
10. if

2.6 Subordinating conjunctions and conjunctive adverbs

Subordinating conjunctions combine two clauses much in the same way as coordinating conjunctions, but there is a significant difference between the two types of conjunctions. A clause that follows a subordinating conjunction cannot stand alone and is dependent on a main clause to complete its meaning.

Subordinating conjunctions

These clauses. are often called dependent clauses.

main clause + subordinating conjunction + dependent clause

Some of the most commonly used subordinating conjunctions are listed here: after although, even though, how, that though, as, if, till, as if, inasmuch as, unless, as long as, in order that, until, as much as, lest, when, as soon as, as though because, before, now that, whenever, provided (that) since so that, where, wherever, while, even if, than, why

If a sentence begins with a clause introduced by a subordinating conjunction, that clause will be separated from the main clause by a comma. For example:

1. After I received the horrible news, I fell into a deep depression.
2. If you can lend us a hand, we can pay you a few dollars.
3. When the train's horn began to sound, we knew there was trouble ahead.

If the clause introduced by a subordinating conjunction follows the main clause, a comma is not required.

1. I don't know why you treat me this way.
2. We'll wait in the car until the rain stops.
3. The young couple hurried to the bank as soon as they received the check.

The conjunction because tends to use a comma to separate its clause from the main clause whether it stands at the beginning of the sentence or follows the main clause. However, when the subordinate clause follows the main clause, the use of a comma is optional, particularly when the verb in the main clause is negated.

You can't go back to class yet(,) because you still have the flu. Because you got drunk, your license has been revoked.

Exercise 2.6.1 Using the conjunction provided, write an appropriate clause to complete each of the following sentences.

Example: If you help me with the dishes , I will help you with your homework.

1. When she dropped the vase she was dusting.
2. Although I'm still in love with you.
3. As long as we will stand beside you.
4. In order that you will have to have a complete physical examination.

5. Wherever you will find your success in life.
6. Even though I am willing to work out our differences.
7. Unless you won't be welcome in this house again.
8. Providing that she will be allowed to enter graduate school.
9. After they can start getting ready for bed.
10. Since you have become part of our family.

The conjunction since has two meanings therefore, is used in two different ways:

The reason for an action

1. Since you refuse to explain your behavior, I have to side with Mary.
2. Since there is little doubt about his guilt, the judge fined him a hundred dollars.

A time in the past when something occurred

- 3 Since you first arrived on campus, I've had my eye on you.
- 4 Since their son left home, they haven't heard a word from him.

2.6.1 Positioning for emphasis

The clause that appears first in a sentence is usually the one that is emphasized. 'This is true of both subordinating clauses and main clauses.

1. When he finally got home, he stretched out on the sofa to rest. emphasis on when he finally got home
2. He stretched out on the sofa to rest when he finally got home. emphasis on he stretched out on the sofa to rest

Exercise 2.6.2 Using the conjunction provided, write an appropriate clause to complete each sentence that follows. Then rewrite the sentence by placing the subordinate clause at the beginning of the sentence.

Example:

He won't get paid unless he finishes the job.
Unless he finishes the job, he won't get paid.

1. I'm going to make some breakfast while
2. She always visits the museums whenever
3. The jurors couldn't believe the witness as long as
4. Can you set the table for me after
5. His mother was less concerned about him now that

6. They resolved the problem before
7. John opened a savings account once
8. You will receive your inheritance assuming that
9. I didn't feel like going to bed although
10. You can't watch television until.

Exercise 2.6.3 Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate clause. Use a subordinating conjunction that makes sense in the context of the sentence.

Example:

Margaret burst into tears when he asked her to marry him.

1. It stopped raining and the sun came out again.
2. he worked in France as a translator.
3. I'm going to take away all your privileges.
4. the hikers decided to return home early.
5. , no one will trust the woman.
6. he was one of the best-liked boys in school.
7. you'll never get into college.
8. the bank will make her a loan of a thousand dollars.
9. We'd stay in Paris longer
10. By the end of the day, they were exhausted

Exercise 2.6.4 Using the conjunctions provided, write original sentences that contain a clause introduced by a subordinating conjunction and a main clause. Place the subordinating clause before or after the main clause.

Example:

although

Although her health had been failing, the queen attended the ceremony.

OR

The queen attended the ceremony although her health had been failing.

1. whenever
2. as long as
3. as if
4. assuming that
5. because.
6. where
7. in order that.
8. since
9. how

2.6.2 Tenses

You may have noticed that a variety of tenses and various auxiliary verbs can be used in both subordinating and main clauses. Let's look at some specific examples of how tenses vary. In the present tense and in the past tense with most conjunctions, both clauses are in the same tense.

Present:	When I travel in Europe, I prefer to stay in small hotels.
Past:	When I traveled in Europe, I preferred to stay in small hotels.

The other tenses and the progressive tenses are not so reliable. One tense may be used in one clause and another tense in the other clause. For example, with when and while, one clause can be in the progressive tense and the other not.

1. I was sleeping in the living room when I heard a strange noise.
2. While I was sleeping in the living room, I heard a strange noise.
3. She had been preparing supper when the kitchen door flew open.
4. While she had been preparing supper, the kitchen door flew open.

Notice in the preceding examples that in the progressive tense, the past perfect can substitute for the past tense. This fact can be further illustrated by comparing the following pairs of sentences with those just illustrated:

1. I had been sleeping in the living room when I heard a strange noise.
2. While I had been sleeping in the living room, I heard a strange noise.
3. She was preparing supper when the kitchen door flew open.
4. While she was preparing supper, the kitchen door flew open.

Future Tense

When a main clause is in the future tense, the present tense is used in the subordinating clause.

future tense in + conjunction + present tense in main clause dependent clause
or conjunction + present tense in + future tense in dependent clause main clause

1. I will phone you immediately when I arrive in town.
2. Once the new tenant is settled in, we'll invite her over for coffee.
3. I will support you as long as you need my help.

However, if there is an auxiliary other than a future-tense auxiliary (shall, will) in the main clause, that auxiliary is used in its present- or past tense form. Such auxiliaries are can, could, must, would, and should. The exceptions to this rule are the auxiliaries that are composed of a verb followed by to; for example: be able to, have to, want to, be supposed to, ought to, need to, allowed to.

- These auxiliaries can be in the future tense in the main clause. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

- I can phone you when I arrive in town.
- I will be able to phone you when I arrive in town.
- Once she is settled in, we must invite her over for coffee.
- Once she is settled in, we will have to invite her over for coffee.
- Until he gets a job, Maria should have nothing to do with him.
- Until he gets a job, Maria won't be allowed to have anything to do with him.
- If the main clause is an imperative, the subordinating clause can be in the present tense or the present perfect tense, depending on the meaning required:
 - Present tense subordinating clause
 - * Stand up straight while I measure your inseam.
 - * Come right home after the game is over.
 - * Think of me here in Iowa when you're vacationing in sunny Mexico.
 - Present tense or present-perfect-tense subordinating clause following after
 - * Sign on the dotted line after you read through the contract.
 - * Sign on the dotted line after you have read through the contract.

The action of the imperative in the preceding example is carried out after another action has been completed. Although the present tense is often used for this meaning, it is the present perfect tense that is more common to describe an action in the past that follows the preposition after. For example:

1. Set the table after you do your homework.
2. Set the table after you have done your homework.
3. Let's light a fire after we finish cleaning the living room.
4. Let's light a fire after we have finished cleaning the living room.

Exercise 2.6.5 Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate clause and in the needed tense.

Example:

She will forget about him after enough time goes by.

1. Open the front door
2. _____ we can work on your resume together.
3. While he was studying at the library,
4. _____ take the dog out for a walk.
5. When Ms. Harris goes on vacation,
6. Whenever Robert plays his clarinet,
7. Once he finally understood what she meant,
8. Please have your passport and visa ready
9. _____ if that is truly what you want me to do.

10. Inasmuch as there is so little time left,

Exercise 2.6.6 Using the conjunctions provided, write original sentences that contain two clauses, one of which should be in the future tense.

Example:

while: While you clean up the kitchen, I'll get the kids ready for bed.

1. until
2. once
3. if
4. before
5. unless

2.6.3 Conjunctive adverbs

Certain adverbial expressions can function as conjunctions. They are called conjunctive adverbs, and they combine two clauses just as other conjunctions do. However, there is a different approach to punctuation with conjunctive adverbs: a semicolon precedes a conjunctive adverb, and a comma follows it. Here are some commonly used conjunctive adverbs:

after, all, also, as a result, in addition incidentally indeed, next, nonetheless, on the contrary, besides, in fact, consequently, in other words, on the other hand otherwise, finally, instead, still, for example, likewise, then, furthermore, meanwhile, therefore, hence, moreover, thus, however, nevertheless.

Conjunctive

Use conjunctive adverbs to combine two clauses that are closely linked by meaning or intent. For example:

1. Robert spoke out of turn; nonetheless, his statement made sense, and everyone agreed with him.
2. My daughter is quite shy; however, she is an aggressive athlete when playing soccer.
3. You have to pay your back rent immediately; otherwise, I'll be forced to evict you.

Exercise 2.6.7 *Combine the following pairs of sentences with any appropriate conjunctive adverb. Example:

Jake lied. His father was forced to punish him.

Jake lied; therefore, his father was forced to punish him.

1. Tom was lounging under a tree. The other boys were loading rocks onto the truck.
2. The woman stole his watch and ring. She attempted to take a credit card from his pocket.
3. The operation was a miserable failure. The poor woman died on the operating table.
4. I was supposed to go to class. I decided to go to the river for a swim.
5. Mr. Helms collects old coins. He has several rare gold pieces from Spain.

6. There will be a test tomorrow. You'll also have a lengthy assignment for over the weekend.
7. The woman didn't understand that it was a crime. She was probably not in her right mind.
8. Jim drank too much, spent too much, and caroused too much. He acted like a jackass.
9. You place the chemicals in a beaker. You light the Bunsen burner.
10. Don't be afraid to ask him for a loan. He can afford it.

Unlike the case with other conjunctions, conjunctive adverbs work best when they follow the main clause. Also, in contrast to subordinating clauses, clauses that follow conjunctive adverbs make complete sense and can stand alone. Compare the following:

Clause following a conjunctive adverb	Subordinating clause
Finally, he spoke up about the idea.	When he spoke up about the idea.
Meanwhile, Bill worked on the car.	Since Bill worked on the car.
For example, Einstein was a poor student.	Although Einstein was a poor student.
In fact, I was once in Brazil.	Whether I was once in Brazil

Exercise 2.6.8 Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate clause.

Example:

He waited an hour for a table; however, the wait was worth it, for the food was delicious.

1. _____; nonetheless, I stayed through the whole concert.
2. _____ besides, she was a wonderful dancer.
3. The storm was battering their tent; nevertheless,
4. They were swimming for their lives; finally,
5. He was a well-known thief and liar; indeed,
6. _____; for example, there is evidence of climate change.
7. _____; furthermore, I have proof that her documents are forgeries.
8. The children can play several instruments; in fact,
9. Mr. Dean didn't participate in the discussion; instead,
10. You have to pay your fine now; otherwise,

Exercise 2.6.9 Using the conjunctive adverbs provided, write original sentences that contain two clauses.

Example:

however

I can't come to your wedding: however, my son will be there to cheer you on.

1. besides
2. nonetheless
3. still

4. consequently
5. thus
6. meanwhile
7. otherwise
8. therefore
9. Incidentally
10. moreover
11. in other words
12. in fact
13. as a result
14. also
15. on the other hand

Exercise 2.6.10 Write original sentences with the following conjunctions provided. Note that these conjunctions are of various types: coordinating, subordinating, correlative, and conjunctive adverbs.

1. although
2. but
3. yet
4. unless
5. since
6. accordingly
7. providing that
8. in addition
9. either/or
10. as if

2.7 Pronouns

In the category of pronouns, people tend to be most familiar with personal pronouns, since these parts of speech are widely used in the English language. Other types of pronouns also exist, however, and they must be identified and practiced in order for you to be able to use them well in sentence writing. This chapter addresses the following types of pronouns: personal pronouns, relative pronouns, demonstrative pronouns, reflexive pronouns, indefinite pronouns, reciprocal pronouns, and intensive pronouns.

All pronouns are used as a replacement for a form of a noun. For example:

- Pronoun as a subject
the man is → he is
- Pronoun as an object
we saw the man → we saw him
- Possessive pronoun
the man's → his

2.7.1 Personal pronouns

The personal pronouns have a subjective form, an objective form, and a possessive form. The subjective form is used in place of a noun subject of a sentence. The objective form is used in place of a noun serving as either a direct object, an indirect object, or the object of a preposition. The possessive form replaces a possessive noun formed with an apostrophe plus 's (for example, Bill's) or in a prepositional phrase introduced by of (for example, of Bill). The personal pronouns are as follows:

SUBJECTIVE	OBJECTIVE	POSSESSIVE
I	me	my/mine
you	you	your/yours
he	him	his/his
she	her	her/hers
it	it	its/its
we	us	our/ours
they	them	their/theirs
who	whom	whose/whose
what	what	whose/whose

When a possessive modifies a noun, the first possessive form in the preceding list of pairs is used:

1. My car is new.
2. Her books were on the floor.
3. Their tent blew over in the wind.

When the possessive is used in place of the possessive word and the noun it modifies, the noun is omitted, and the second form of the pairs is used.

1. Mine is new.
2. Hers were on the floor.

3. Theirs blew over in the wind.

It is only the third-person pronouns (he, she, it, they, who, and what) that are substitutions for a noun. He, she, and it replace singular nouns.

The doctor is young.	He is young.
Their daughter was ill.	She was ill.
lim opened the cage.	He opened it.

They replaces plural nouns-both animate and inanimate.

Are the boys home?	Are they home?
Did you meet our visitors?	Did you meet them?

Both who and what are used in questions.

Jack broke his arm	Who broke his arm?
The dog ate the pie.	What did the dog eat?

The first- and second-person

The first- and second-person pronouns (I, you, we) are not replacements for nouns but rather function on their own. However, I can be combined with nouns or other pronouns, and that combination can be replaced by a form of we. For example:

1. Jane and I live on the same street.
2. The girls saw Tom and me.
3. We live on the same street
4. You and I will always be friends.
5. The girls saw us.
6. She and I started a club.
7. We started a club.

A pronoun serves as the subject in each of the following sentences. Using that pronoun as your cue, write one sentence with that pronoun serving as a direct or indirect object; write a second sentence using the pronoun as the object of a prepositions and write a third sentence using the pronoun as a possessive. Link the content of each sentence so that you create a simple story line.

Exercise 2.7.1 A pronoun serves as the subject in each of the following sentences. Using that pronoun as your cue, write one sentence with that pronoun serving as a direct or indirect object; write a second sentence using the pronoun as the object of a preposition; and write a third sentence using the pronoun as a possessive. Link the content of each sentence so that you create a simple story line.

Example:

She developed a friendship with John.

Did John take her out on a date?

Not really, but John spoke with her every day.

Her father never really grew to like John.

1. They broke down on a regular basis.
 - a.
 - b.
 - c.
2. It destroyed several houses on the edge of town.
 - a.
 - b.
 - c.
3. We never allowed the dogs in the dining room during meals.
 - a.
 - b.
 - c.
4. I want to travel to Mexico during winter vacation.
 - a.
 - b.
 - c.
5. You bought new clothes and shoes but never went to the party.
 - a.
 - b.
 - c.
6. He had to laugh when he saw his brother dressed as a clown.
 - a.
 - b.
 - c.
7. She caught a bad cold and had to stay home a few days.
 - a.
 - b.
 - c.

2.7.2 Relative pronouns

Relative pronouns

Relative pronouns are used to combine two sentences that contain identical nouns or pronouns. The sentence in which the noun is replaced by a relative pronoun becomes a subordinating clause. As such, that clause cannot stand alone; it functions as part of the main clause. The person and number of the antecedent of the relative pronoun will determine the person and number of the relative pronoun person and number of antecedent → person and number of relative pronoun

The English relative pronouns are who, whom, whose, which, that, and an elliptical form, in which the relative pronoun is omitted but understood. The forms of who and which are used to introduce a nonrestrictive relative clause—that is, a clause that gives parenthetical information. Nonrestrictive relative clauses are set off from the rest of the sentence by commas. That introduces a restrictive relative clause—that is, a clause that defines the antecedent in the main clause. Let's look at some example sentences:

Nonrestrictive relative clauses

- He met the mayor, who was elected in a landslide.
The primary information is that he met the mayor. The writer of this sentence is giving incidental information (the mayor was elected in a landslide) that is not necessarily pertinent to the fact that he met the mayor.
- She approached the officer, whom her brother knew from college.
The primary information is that she approached the officer. The writer of this sentence is giving incidental information (her brother knew the officer from college) that is not necessarily pertinent to the fact that she approached the officer.
- I opened the ledger, which had two large ink stains on it.
The primary information is that I opened the ledger. The writer of this sentence is giving incidental information (the ledger had two large ink stains on it) that is not necessarily pertinent to the fact that I opened the ledger.

The relative clauses just illustrated merely provide parenthetical information; the information is not necessary for the meaning of the main clause. Those clauses could be omitted, because they do not enhance the meaning of the main clause:

1. He met the mayor.
2. She approached the officer
3. I opened the ledger.

Restrictive relative clauses

- He met the mayor that was accused of unethical practices.
He didn't meet just any mayor. The relative clause explains more about its antecedent: this mayor was accused of unethical practices.
- She approached the officer that had given her a ticket.
She didn't approach just any officer. The relative clause explains more about its antecedent: this officer had given her a ticket.
- I opened the ledger that was hidden in the back of my boss's closet.
I didn't open just any ledger. The relative clause explains more about its antecedent: this ledger was hidden in the back of my boss's closet.

When writing sentences with relative clauses in them, it is necessary to choose the appropriate relative pronoun. If you wish to make a parenthetical statement, choose a nonrestrictive relative pronoun. If you wish to add information that explains the antecedent in the main clause, choose a restrictive relative pronoun. For example:

1. David danced with the woman, who has a summer house on the shore.
2. David danced with the woman that had been flirting with him.
3. David danced with the woman who had been flirting with him.

Be aware that who can function as a restrictive relative pronoun and can replace that,

Elliptical relative pronouns

- I found the little ashtray (that) you made in junior high school.
- Ne finally arrived at the corner (that) John had been waiting on for hours.
- Here's the jacket (that) I bought yesterday.

Notice that the word that can be omitted in these clauses only when they are used as objects. When that is used as the subject of the clause, it must be retained.

- Here's the jacket that was made in France. subject
- Have you met our new neighbors that live on Hyde Street? subject

An elliptical relative pronoun can be derived from a clause containing either that or which. However, when the relative pronoun is omitted, the tone of the clause becomes restrictive.

- Here's the jacket, which I bought yesterday. → Here's the jacket I bought yesterday.
- Here's the jacket that I bought yesterday. → Here's the jacket I bought yesterday.

It is correct to use whose to refer to either an animate or an inanimate antecedent. With inanimate antecedents, the prepositional phrase of which can replace whose. For example:

Animate antecedents

- Tim liked the girl, whose eyes were following him wherever he went.
Have you interviewed the man whose house burned down?

Inanimate antecedents

- She bought a sweater, whose dark color didn't flatter her.
- She bought a sweater, the dark color of which didn't flatter her
- The judge studied the document, whose content was extremely vague.
- The judge studied the document, the content of which was extremely vague.

Prepositions in relative clauses require a special look. Their position is not static; they can occupy two different places in the clause. In formal style, the preposition precedes a nonrestrictive relative pronoun. For example:

1. The lawyer, from whom he received the information, is under investigation.
2. I cannot explain the circumstances, under which she gradually lost her wealth.
3. They innocently hiked toward the woods, in which cannibals were said to dwell.

In a less formal style, the preposition can be placed at the end of the clause:

1. The lawyer, whom he received the information from, is under investigation.
2. In a still less formal style, the correct use of whom is avoided.

3. The lawyer, who he received the information from, is under investigation.

When that and who (m) are used as restrictive relative pronouns, prepositions always appear at the end of the relative clause. This is also true with elliptical relative pronouns

1. The dress that she slipped into was much too big for her.
2. The dress she slipped into was much too big for her.
3. That's the old man whom Thomas works for That's the old man Thomas works for.

Exercise 2.7.2 Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate nonrestrictive relative clause.

Example:

Henry ordered a cheese pizza, which is not his girlfriend's favorite food.

1. The soldiers stormed the fort,
2. We spent a week in the capital.
3. I'd like to introduce you to our new coach,
4. Dr. Flores, has to return to Madrid.
5. Can you explain this formula,

Follow the same directions, but provide a restrictive relative clause.

- 6 He hurried up to the boys
- 7 I need a laptop
- 8 The man is a friend of mine.
- 9 Id prefer to speak to the clerk
- 10 Send me a copy of the message

Exercise 2.7.3 Complete each sentence that follows with (a) a clause that is introduced by a preposition, (b) a nonrestrictive clause that places the preposition at the end of the clause, (c) a restrictive clause with a preposition, and (d) an elliptical pronoun with a preposition.

Example:

He found a large chest

- a , in which someone had hidden a map.
- b which he found some money in.
- c that a cat was sleeping on.
- d his father had paid a hundred dollars for.

1. The girls had to find accommodations in a village
 - a
 - b.
 - c.
 - d.

2. Mr. Dean hoped to speak with the owners

- a.
- b.
- c.
- d.

3. She made her way to the bed

- a.
- b.
- c.
- d.

4. Sally believed she was in love with the actor

- a.
- b.
- c.
- d.

2.7.3 Demonstrative pronouns

The singular demonstrative pronouns are this and that. This refers to someone or something nearby or part of the present topic of conversation. That points to someone or something in the distance or referred to in the past. Their plural forms are these and those and refer, respectively, to something nearby or in the distance. These pronouns also function as adjectives located nearby + this/these located in the distance + that/those

This fellow is in a lot of trouble.	He is nearby. We're talking about him now.
That fellow was rather arrogant.	He is in the distance. We talked about him Carrier.
These people are friends of mine.	They are nearby. We're talking about them now.
Those people work for Mr. Paine.	They are in the distance. We talked about them earlier.

When these pronouns are not accompanied by a noun, they function as pronouns rather than as adjectives, but their meaning of closeness or distance from a person or thing is maintained

1. This is the one I want.
2. That was the last one.
3. I borrowed these from Jim
4. Were those once a different color?

As is true of other pronouns, demonstrative pronouns can be subjects or objects. To indicate a possessive, a demonstrative pronoun becomes the object of the preposition of. Here are examples:

This really wasn't necessary.	subject
Did you buy those in Mexico?	object
We spoke about that a moment ago.	object of preposition
What is the meaning of this?	possession with of Exercise 2.7.4 Write two original sentences: one using the cue word provided as a modifier of a noun, and one using the cue word as a pronoun.

Example:

this

This puppy is the last of the litter.

This makes me very mad

1. this

a.

b.

2. that

a.

b.

3. these

a.

b.

4. those

a.

b.

2.7.4 Reflexive pronouns

Reflexive pronouns are used only as objects and never as subjects of a sentence. They can be direct objects, indirect objects, or the objects of prepositions

He cut himself shaving.	direct object
He bought himself some new ties.	indirect object
He was talking to himself.	object of preposition

Compare the English personal pronouns with their reflexive-pronoun counterparts:

PERSONAL PRONOUNS	REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS
you	myself
he	yourself
he	himself
she	herself
it	itself
we	ourselves
you	yourselves
they	themselves

When the subject and object are different persons or things, the object is a personal pronoun. For example:

The man asked her what happened.

It is when the subject and object are the same person or thing that a reflexive pronoun is used.

The man asked himself what happened.

Exercise 2.7.5 Write two sentences with the reflexive pronoun indicated and the cue words provided in parentheses. in your first sentence, use the reflexive as a direct object. in your second sentence, use the reflexive as an indirect object.

Example:himself (illness/watch)Despite a long illness, the elderly man carried himself well.Tom wants to buy himself a new watch.

1. herself (spring / ring)

(a)

(b)

2. yourself (rarely / soon)

(a)

(b)

3. ourselves (dinner / dessert)

(a)

(b)

4. myself (angrily / similar)

(a)

(b)

5. themselves (sandwiches / wine)

(a)

(b)

Using the first cue provided, write a sentence with that cue as the object of a preposition. Then, using the reflexive pronoun provided, write a sentence with that pronoun as the object of a preposition.

Example:sister / herselfMaria is going to buy a used car for her sisterMaria is going to buy a used car for herself

6 grandfather / himself

(a)

(b)

7 soldier / yourselves

(a)

(b)

8 flight attendant / myself

(a)

(b)

9 guests / themselves

(a)

(b)

1. dancer/herself

(a)

(b)

Indefinite pronouns

The indefinite pronouns have a unique function. They act in a sentence like other pronouns—that is, they are substitutions for nouns; however, the indefinite pronouns are not a replacement for a specific noun. Instead, they refer to anyone, everyone, or no one in particular. Here are some of the most commonly used indefinite pronouns that are always singular:

anyone/anybody	neither
each	no one/nobody
either	one
everyone/everybody	someone/somebody much

Each pronoun in the four pairs of indefinite pronouns (anyone/anybody, everyone/everybody, no one/nobody, someone/somebody) is identical in meaning to its companion pronoun.

Anyone can play this game.	Anybody can play this game
No one understands me.	Nobody understands me.

Also, do not confuse the indefinite pronoun one (a number) with the personal pronoun one (a person).

Indefinite	One of you will have to stay on duty tonight.
Personal	One might at first assume that his theory is correct.

It's important to recognize these pronouns as singular, because some of them are used with prepositional phrases that can contain a plural. This construction sometimes causes confusion and results in the use of a plural verb where a singular verb is needed. Each of the dismissed employees receives a termination bonus. Since each is a singular, the singular verb receives is needed in this sentence. The plural noun in the prepositional phrase of the dismissed employees is not the subject of the sentence.

Here is another example:

- One of you has to take responsibility.

Since one is a singular, the singular verb has is needed in this sentence. The plural pronoun you is not the subject of the sentence.

Even when more than one person or thing is understood, these pronouns still always use only a singular verb. For example:

- These two ties are the right price, but neither really appeals to me.

A few indefinite pronouns are plural, such as both, few, many, and several, and they require a plural verb when used as the subject of a sentence. For example:

1. Both of these women are candidates for mayor.
2. Few understand his motives.
3. Many of his opponents lie about his record.

There are also indefinite pronouns that are considered either singular or plural:

all	most
any	none
more	some

The choice of a singular or plural verb with these indefinite pronouns depends on their usage in the sentence and on any accompanying prepositional phrase:

Singular

1. All is lost!
2. You can take the last piece of pie. More is coming.
3. Don't eat the whole cake. Some is for Bill.

Plural

1. I met John's fraternity brothers. Most are quite nice
2. All of the children have had their inoculations.
3. There are several magazines on the floor, but none are mine

Exercise 2.7.6 Using the indefinite pronoun provided, write an original sentence with the pronoun as the subject of the sentence

1. much
2. either
3. each
4. neither
5. one
6. everybody
7. no one
8. few of them
9. many
10. each of the contestants

2.7.5 Reciprocal pronouns

There are only two reciprocal pronouns: one another and each other. Either one is correct, and each can replace the other in a sentence. They are used to combine two sentences that say that two persons or things are carrying out the same action. For example:

1. John loves Mary. Mary loves John. → John and Mary love one another.
2. The dog glares at the cat. The cat glares → The dog and cat glare at each other at the dog. .
3. She kissed me. I kissed her. → We kissed each other.

When pronouns are used in pairs of sentences as in the last example (She kissed me. I kissed her.), the pronoun I indicates that a second-person-plural pronoun (we) will be used with a reciprocal pronoun. If the pronoun is in the third person, a third-person-plural pronoun (they) will be used with a reciprocal pronoun.

He sees her. She sees him. → They see one another.

2.7.6 Intensive pronouns

Intensive pronouns are often mistaken as reflexive pronouns because they look like reflexive pronouns.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS	INTENSIVE PRONOUNS
I	myself
you	yourself
he	himself
she	herself
it	itself

Intensive pronouns function differently from reflexive pronouns. Their purpose is to emphasize the subject of the sentence. Compare the following pairs of sentences, in which the subject is

1. I believe that war with them can be avoided.
2. I myself believe that war with them can be avoided.
3. You said that you could afford it.
4. You yourself said that you could afford it.
5. They are the ones to blame.
6. They themselves are the ones to blame.

Exercise 2.7.7 1. William tried to free the car from the muddy rut.

2. Several of the men heard the strange sounds in the attic

3. I longed to return to my homeland.

4. Ms. Thomas and I were rather good dancers.

5. The administration is responsible for our improved economy.

6. Nancy broke down in tears upon hearing the news.
7. You tried to get some help for them.
8. He felt ashamed for what had happened that day
9. They attempted to exploit the situation

2.8 Prepositions

We can provide an overview of the answer to the question of the importance of prepositions in sentences and how they improve the meaning of a sentence, making it easier to understand and more coherent.

There is no doubt that prepositions are one of the basic structures in the construction of sentences in the English language and are the main key in the book, in addition to the other rules that we talked about previously and will talk about later.

Prepositions

Prepositions are crucial components of English grammar that serve to establish relationships between nouns, pronouns, and other words within a sentence. Their importance can be summarized in several key aspects:

- Functions of Prepositions

- Establishing Relationships: Prepositions indicate the relationships between different elements in a sentence. For instance, in "The book is on the table," the preposition "on" shows the relationship between the book and the table, clarifying where the book is located [10].
- Indicating Time and Place: Prepositions help specify time, location, direction, and manner. For example:
 - * Time: "We went to the beach on Saturday" (indicating when the action took place).
 - * Place: "The cat is under the bed" (indicating where the cat is located).
 - * Direction: "He walked towards the park" (indicating the direction of movement) [10, 11].
- Creating Meaningful Sentences: Without prepositions, sentences can become vague or misleading. For instance, using the wrong preposition can alter the intended meaning, as illustrated by the difference between "throwing a ball to you" (implying a throw meant for catching) versus "throwing a ball at you" (implying an aim to hit).[12].

- Importance in Communication Prepositions enhance clarity and precision in communication. They allow speakers and writers to convey specific meanings and relationships, which is essential for effective communication. For example, the sentence "I am flying in a plane" suggests a passenger experience, while "I am flying a plane" indicates the act of piloting.

- Challenges for Learners

Many English learners struggle with prepositions due to their nuanced usage and the lack of direct translations from other languages. The same preposition can have multiple meanings depending on context, leading to confusion. For example, the preposition "at" can denote time, location, or direction, making it challenging to master

Prepositions are used to introduce a prepositional phrase that ends with a noun phrase or pronoun

Prepositions

preposition + object of preposition

from + the old man

Some prepositions can also function as adverbs or conjunctions. Following is a list of the most commonly used English prepositions:

about	below	from	through above	beneath	in	throughout across	beside	into	till after	besides	like	to against	between	near	toward along	beyond	of	under
among	by	off	until around	despite	on	up
at	down	out	with before	during	over	within behind	for	since	without

There is a significant difference between beside and besides. Use beside when you mean near or next to. Use besides when you mean in addition to or other than. For example:

He stood beside her bed. He stood next to her bed.

No one cared besides Jack. No one cared other than Jack.

The prepositions till and until can be used interchangeably.

2.8.1 Compound prepositions

Some prepositions are called compound prepositions because they are composed of more than one word. For example:

ahead of	in place of
because of	in regard to
by means of	in spite of contrary to	instead of
in addition to	in view of
in back of	next to
in case of	on account of
in front of	out of
in lieu of	prior to
in light of

Whether a preposition is a single word or a compound preposition, it is still used in the same way: to introduce a prepositional phrase.

1. We went straight home after the concert.
2. He arrived late because of the concert.
3. She received a gift from her brother.
4. Jane invited Alex instead of her brother.
5. A woodpecker flew through the window.
6. A stranger was standing next to the window.

2.8.2 Using of

The usage of the preposition of may seem obvious, but it requires a special explanation. The preposition of not only is used in several compound prepositions but also plays a role when it stands alone. The preposition of can serve in place of an apostrophe plus s to indicate a possessive. Let's look at some examples:

Preposition of	Possessive
the roar of the lion	the lion's roar
the father of the bride	the bride's father
the fur of the dog	the dog's fur

Although the preceding examples show the two forms used to express ownership, the apostrophe plus-s form tends to be used most frequently with persons or other animate nouns, while the preposition of is usually preferred for inanimate objects. For example:

the quality of his voice	the length of the sidewalk
a ring of truth	a large stack of books
an explanation of grammar	the depth of the river

In some cases, the possessive form is suitable for inanimate objects (the sidewalk's length, the river's depth), but, in general, the preposition of is used to show possession with an inanimate object.

It is often the case that of is used as a synonym for about. For example:

Did you know of the accident?	Did you know about the accident?
Please don't speak of this again.	Please don't speak about this again.
Does he have knowledge of this case?	Does he have knowledge about this case?

Exercise 2.8.1 using the prepositional phrases provided, write original sentences

Example:

of the story The ending of the story was sad.

1. of her penmanship
2. of the month
3. of mathematics
4. of the baby
5. of his tuxedo
6. of the carpet
7. of the United States
8. of our team
9. of his wife
10. of the sandwich

Exercise 2.8.2 Using each of the prepositions provided once, write two original sentences that also include the cue phrase provided in parentheses.

Example:

for / on account of (his sister)

Jack had a good suggestion for his sister.

Uncle Bill remained at home on account of his sister.

1. from / in addition to (Ms. Garcia)

(a)

(b)

2. on / in back of (their mobile home)

(a)

(b)

3. about / in light of (this critical situation)

(a)

(b)

4. beyond / in place of (the wooden fence)

(a)

(b)

5. in / out of (the classroom)

(a)

(b)

6. during / prior to (their weekly meeting)

(a)

(b)

7. besides / in case of (another problem)

(a)

(b)

8. with / by means of (atomic energy)

(a)

(b)

9. till / in view of (final examinations)

(a)

(b)

10. despite / contrary to (his stated goal)

Among and between

In order to write accurately, you have to distinguish between the prepositions among and between. Among is used with a prepositional phrase that involves more than two persons or things. Between is used only with a prepositional phrase that involves just two persons or things. Let's look at some example sentences:

1. Among the women in their department was a Ph.D. candidate from Canada
2. I just can't decide between these two Ph.D. candidates.
3. We have always counted Andrea among our good friends.
4. Who is that standing between Andrea and Michael?

Exercise 2.8.3 The mood among the members of the losing team was not good. The difference between right and wrong should be obvious to you

1. The boys spent a lot of time alone in
2. Rita sat among _____ and chatted amiably.
3. I think I'd prefer a table by
4. Contrary to _____ the contract is not yet signed.
5. When the storm came, they dashed into .
6. Have you decided between ?
7. The entire first floor smells of ?
8. The boys were hiding among.
9. I've been living in Peru for
10. The handsome young fellow stood opposite

2.8.3 To and out

Some words function both as prepositions and as other parts of speech. As a preposition, to describes a motion toward a place: to the garden, to the school, to the other side of the forest. As a preposition, it also identifies a person to whom something is directed or given: to John, to her, to my youngest child. In addition to these functions, to is used as a particle word in an infinitive: to run, to jump, to be. These two uses—the prepositional use and the infinitive use—must be distinguished.

If to is followed by a noun phrase or pronoun, it is being used as a preposition. If it is followed by a verb, it is being used as the particle word of an infinitive:

Prepositions

1. The horses came running to the fence when I called.
2. Mr. Keller sent a large package to them.
3. She was hurrying to the door when she fell.

Infinitives

1. Don't try to fool me with your fancy words.
2. It's going to be more difficult than I first thought.
3. We need to perform the surgery on her immediately.

Another difference of usage occurs with the preposition out. When it is followed by a noun phrase or pronoun, it is being used as a preposition, such as out the door. This same word can be used as an adverb that describes where someone or something is and usually indicates that someone is not at home or not in the office. Let's look at some example sentences:

2.8.4 Prepositions

1. Lorraine flew out the door and ran to the bus stop.
2. What did you throw out the window?
3. Gray smoke coiled out the chimney.

For example, we have:

Tom wanted to stay out with his friends. The doctor will be out until three P.M.
The opposite of out, meaning not at home or not in the office, is in. It means at home or at the office.

Adverbs

I stayed in all day.	I stayed at home all day
Dr. Jones won't be in today.	Dr. Jones won't be in the office today.
Were you out late last night?

2.8.5 Into, onto, upon

The three prepositions into, onto, and upon are composed of two prepositions written as one word. Into indicates that someone or something is moving to the inside of an enclosure. Onto indicates that someone or something is located on top of something. Upon is a synonym for on. Consider these examples:

Karen ran into the tent and lit the lantern.	She ran to the inside of the tent.
Doug climbed onto the roof with a hammer.	He is now located on top of the roof.
A single acorn fell upon the ground.	It fell on the ground.

When any of these three prepositions is written as two separate words, the first part becomes an adverb and the second part is a preposition. For example: Walk in to your left and follow the signs to our offices. In this sentence, the adverb tells where someone should be-not out, but in. The preposition tells what direction to go: to your left. Now consider this sentence: I was never turned on to classical music. In this sentence, the adverb on modifies the verb turned; it is not part of the preposition. The prepositional phrase is to classical music. Now look at this sentence: Climb up onto the roof! Here the adverb up modifies the verb climb. Someone is being told in what direction to climb. The prepositional phrase onto the roof identifies the place where this person is supposed to climb.

Story!

The preposition upon is used in a couple of phrases that do not change their form. For example:

Upon my soul!

the opening phrase of some stories and fairy tales

Once upon a time... an interjection meaning "I'm so surprised" or "I can't believe it"

2.8.6 Adjectival and adverbial prepositional phrases

Some prepositional phrases modify nouns or pronouns. They are called adjective phrases. Similarly, other prepositional phrases are called adverb phrases because they modify verbs, adverbs, or adjectives. Be aware that it is not the preposition that determines whether the phrase is adjectival or adverbial, but rather it is the use of the phrase. The same prepositional phrase could be an adjective phrase or an adverb phrase. For example:

When a prepositional phrase describes a noun or pronoun, it normally stands immediately

The boy at the window looked hungry and cold.	The phrase at the window describes the boy	it is adjectival.
The boy stood at the window and waved.	The phrase at the window describes where he stood	it is adverbial.

after the noun or pronoun.

1. The girl with the bouquet beamed with pride.
2. Do you know the woman with Mr. Simon?

When the prepositional phrase tells where, when, how, or to what extent something is done, it is adverbial.

The men stood on the porch and	where , how chatted about the weather.	where , how
We will be leaving for Florida on Wednesday.	where, when Exercise 2.8.4 Complete the following sentences by finishing each prepositional phrase with an appropriate noun phrase. Use any additional phrases to make good sense.

Example:

We rarely talked about the problems he had with his wife.

1. I returned to _____ to say good-bye to the children.
2. Why do you get into _____ ?
3. Someone next to _____ tried to steal the old coins.
4. Ms. Snyder had to speak in opposition to _____ .

5. The tourists have to get back to .

6. The kittens jumped onto

7. The students with

8. The castle was located on top of .

9. A child of sat in a corner weeping

10. No one among .

Exercise 2.8.5 Write original sentences containing adverbial prepositional phrases. Use the adverbial cue provided as the signal for the kind of phrase required.

Example:

where Michael sat on the sofa and read.

1. where

2. when

3. how

4. where

5. when

6. how

2.8.7 Pronouns in prepositional phrases

Most prepositions can be followed by pronouns that are the replacements for nouns. For example:

John came with his friends. John came with them.

The girls hid behind the door. The girls hid behind it.

Never speak about his illness. Never speak about it.

However, some prepositional phrases that describe a location in a place or a time period tend to be replaced not by a preposition and a pronoun but rather by there or then, respectively. For example:

She spent a lot of time in the city. She spent a lot of time there. not in it

Mark was in Asia for two years. Mark was there for two years. not in it

Jim will arrive in the morning. Jim will arrive then. not in it

Were you at work on Monday? Were you at work then? not on it

Prepositional phrases

Prepositional phrases do not normally stand alone. An exception is that in an elliptical response to a statement or question, a prepositional phrase can stand alone if the meaning of the rest of the sentence is understood.

Where did you attend college? In California.

The cat usually sleeps under the bed. No, under the rocking chair.

A few other prepositional phrases can stand alone, especially if they are part of an imperative or an interjection.

1. On your marks, get set, go!
2. At once!
3. On your feet!
4. For heaven's sake!

The preposition than can also be used as a conjunction. When it functions as a conjunction, it is followed by a complete clause:

Preposition	Complete clause
My brother is a bit taller than me.	My brother works harder than I like to work.
Can Mary really run faster than John?	Can Mary really run faster than John can?

Exercise 2.8.6 Rewrite the following sentences, changing the underlined prepositional phrase ending with a noun to a prepositional phrase ending with the appropriate pronoun. Use there or then where needed.

Example:

Jake sat with his friends in the library. Jake sat with them in the library.

1. I never had anything to do with such people.
2. Did you have a good time in Mexico?
3. The twins were seated directly behind their parents.
4. We can probably meet at about eleven o'clock.
5. Was that rude remark meant for Thomas and me?
6. We used to have a lot of fun during spring vacation.
7. I am completely opposed to what you call a satisfactory contract.
8. My aunt and uncle built a small house in the Bahamas.
9. We found a map at the bottom of the treasure chest.
10. Is this a portrait of Queen Victoria?

Exercise 2.8.7 Write original sentences using the phrases provided.

Example:

from my dentist I received this prescription from my dentist.

1. out on the lawn
2. alongside the road
3. above the forest
4. on the lagoon
5. because of you
6. than her
7. toward the opposite shore
8. on to the ledge.
9. of me
10. in front of it

Chapter 3

Towards an advanced level

3.1 Using adjectives

Adjectives are words that modify nouns or pronouns. A variety of adjectival forms must be understood in order for you to write accurately. The most common type is the descriptive adjective.

3.1.1 Descriptive adjectives

Precisely as their name suggests, descriptive adjectives describe someone or something. The following list contains high frequency descriptive adjectives. Consider what they tell about a noun they might modify.

beautiful	funny	kind	short
big	handsome	little	soft blue	happy	red	tall
evil	hard	sad	ugly

The complete listing of all descriptive adjectives would be much longer. You can probably think of many other words that fit this category.

Predicative and attributive adjectives

Adjectives are used primarily in two different ways: predicatively and attributively: A predicate adjective is one that follows a linking verb and modifies a noun or pronoun "from a distance"-that is, separated from the noun itself by the verb. Some commonly used linking verbs are to be, to become, to get, to look, to seem, and to smell.

subject + linking verb + predicate adjective

1. Mr. Price is handsome.
2. My vision seems blurred.
3. That really smells good
4. It suddenly got cold.

adjectives

Naturally, adjectives can be modified by any variety of adverbs. For example: Mr. Price is very handsome.

Today the weather became quite terrible.

Attributive adjectives, on the other hand, stand before a noun. It is common to use more than one adjective to modify nouns in this position.

attributive adjective + subject + verb

1. The young officer came up to me.
2. The frightened young officer came up to me
3. An old man sat down to rest.
4. A tired old man sat down to rest.

You can view attributive adjectives as replacements for relative clauses that contain the linking verb to be. Compare the following two sentences with the previous two examples:

1. The officer, who was frightened and young, came up to me.
2. A man, who was tired and old, sat down to rest.

Let's look at an example of how a relative clause is changed to become an attributive adjective. Here's the original sentence, with the relative clause set off by commas:

The story, which is silly, amused the children.

To convert this sentence, the adjective silly is removed from the relative clause. The remaining words in the relative clause are omitted (as are the commas), and the adjective is placed before the noun. The result is a sentence with an attributive adjective, and that sentence conveys the same meaning as the sentence in which there was a relative clause:

The silly story amused the children.

When a noun follows a linking verb, it is called a predicate nominative. The predicate nominative is a noun that further describes the subject of the sentence. Adjectives can modify the subject, the predicate nominative, or both. For example:

1. The winner was a man from Holland.
2. The eventual winner was a man from Holland.
3. The winner was an athletic man from Holland.
4. The eventual winner was an athletic man from Holland.

A sentence with a predicate nominative can be changed by reversing the positions of the subject and the predicate nominative and still make complete sense. This can occur only with linking verbs.

An athletic man from Holland was the eventual winner.

Some adjectives can be used only as predicate adjectives. They sound awkward if used attributively. Some of the most commonly used ones are these:

afraid	glad	safe
alive	ill	sorry (meaning apologies)
alone	likely	sure
apart	ready	unable aware

Let's look at a couple of sentences illustrating correct versus incorrect usage:

correct usage	incorrect usage
The boy was quite alone	The alone boy waited in the hall.

Certain other adjectives should be used only as attributive adjectives. If they are used as predicate adjectives, they should be followed by predicate nominatives.

atomic	north/south east/west	northern/southern eastern/western	northern/western indoor/outdoor	supplementary maximum	woolen nationwide

If indoor and outdoor are used predicatively, they take the adverbial form indoors and outdoors. If supplementary is used predicatively, its form changes to a noun: a supplement. In the case of woolen, when used predicatively, it becomes the phrase made of wool.

Let's again look at a pair of sentences illustrating correct usage versus incorrect usage:

correct usage	incorrect usage
An occasional rain kept the streets	wet and slick

Exercise 3.1.1 Complete each sentence that follows with an appropriate predicate adjective. Then, write sentence using the same adjective attributively.

Example:

Mark was very sad.

The sad look in her eyes brought me to tears.

a Are the boys

b

a Grandma's kitchen smelled

a How long has this woman been

b

a Your report is a Were you

b a The young lawyer seemed rather

b

a Your rose garden smells

a Why does that little boy always look so

3.1.2 Limiting adjectives

There are nine types of limiting adjectives: definite and indefinite articles, possessive adjectives, demonstrative adjectives, indefinite adjectives, interrogative adjectives, cardinal adjectives, ordinal adjectives, proper adjectives, and nouns used as adjectives. The obvious function of any limiting adjective is to limit or to specify some aspect of the noun it modifies.

3.1.3 Definite and indefinite articles

The definite and indefinite articles illustrate this limitation function well. The definite article (the) specifies someone or something as already known or mentioned. Indefinite articles (a, an) identify an unknown person or thing and persons or things in general. For example:

1. The man on the corner is my friend.
2. A man on the corner was hit by a car.
3. The heavy suitcase belongs to Mary.
4. A heavy suitcase is not allowed.

A specific man is the topic here. He is known to the speaker.

An unspecified man is the topic here. He is unknown to the speaker A specific suitcase is the topic here. The speaker knows that it is heavy Heavy suitcases in general are the topic here.

Indefinite articles are not used with plural nouns. The complete omission of an article with a plural noun indicates that the meaning is indefinite. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

Singular

The boy plays chess.

A good student must behave.

Plural

The boys play chess.

Good students must behave.

Possessive adjectives

Possessive adjectives limit the nouns they modify in terms of the ownership implied: my, your, his, her, its, our, and their. The possessive whose, which inquires into ownership, is also an interrogative adjective but belongs in this group, as well.

My new car is a Ford.

Ownership of the car is limited to me.

Her kitten became quite ill.

Ownership of the kitten is limited to her

Our garden did well this year.

Ownership of the garden is limited to us.

Demonstrative adjectives

The demonstrative adjectives-this, that, these, and those-limit the modified noun to the one identified by the speaker: this one, that one. The demonstrative adjectives show closeness (this, these) or distance (that, those) in the same way as the demonstrative pronouns.

This book is hard to understand

That remark was uncalled for

These men need a job.

Do you know those people?

Exercise 3.1.2 Write three original sentences containing the noun or phrase provided. Use a definite article or an indefinite article (or both) in the first sentence; use a possessive adjective in the second sentence; and use a demonstrative adjective in the third. If a question mark (?) is also provided, make at least one of your sentences a question.

Example:

jacket? The jacket on the bed belongs to him

Have you seen my jacket?

This jacket is just what I've been looking for.

1. CD player?

- a.
- b.
- c.

2. young children

3. pillows?

- a.
- b.
- c.

4. friends and relatives

- a.
- b.
- c.

5. grammar

- a.
- b.
- c.

6. mathematical formula ?

- b.
- c.

7. calendar

- c.
- C.

8. unusual painting

- a.
- b.
- c.

Indefinite adjectives

Indefinite adjectives provide general information about the nouns they modify. They often answer the questions how much? or how many? Among the most common indefinite adjectives are all, any, each, every, few, many, and some. Let's look at some sentences that illustrate their use:

1. All work must be completed by noon
2. how much work?
3. Each candidate will have ten minutes how many candidates?
4. to speak.
5. how many companies?

3.1.4 Interrogative adjectives

The interrogative adjectives are what, which, and whose (as noted earlier, whose is also a possessive adjective). They modify nouns in the same way as other limiting adjectives. What and which inquire into a choice between two persons or things and from among a group of persons or things. Whose asks about ownership. Here are some examples:

1. What airline are you taking to Brazil?
2. What cities do you want to visit?
3. What day will you arrive back in the States?
4. Which game do you like best?
5. Which candidate appeals to you more?
6. Which dessert did you order?
7. Whose limousine is parked in front of the house?
8. Whose husband is a famous rap star?
9. Whose cake won first prize at the fair?

Cardinal adjectives

Cardinal adjectives are simply numbers used as adjectives. They limit the nouns they modify by specifying an amount. That amount can be as little as "zero" or as great as any number you can conceive of. For example:

1. One boy scraped his knee on the ground.
2. Fifteen girls are in the contest.
3. Eighty dollars was too much for the blouse.

Notice that the subject of the last of these sentences is plural, but it is considered a single quantity and therefore takes a singular verb: Eighty dollars was ... Let's consider the difference between the use of a singular verb and a plural verb with such quantities.

If there are eighty individual dollar bills on the floor, you can say: Eighty dollars are on the floor. If, instead, you wish to refer to the entire quantity of eighty dollars as a single sum of money, you can say: Eighty dollars is more than I want to spend.

3.1.5 Ordinal adjectives

Numbers are used in a slightly different adjectival form with ordinal adjectives. These adjectives limit the nouns they modify by specifying numerical order. For example:

1. The first question on the test was simple.
2. They're celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary.
3. Jake is the twentieth boy in line.

The majority of ordinal adjectives are formed by adding -th to the end of a number: fourth, thirtieth, hundredth, and so on. There are only a few irregular forms, as follows:

CARDINAL NUMBER	ORDINAL NUMBER
one	first
two	second
three	third
five	fifth

Exercise 3.1.3 Write an original sentence for each of the cue phrases provided.

1. each student
2. some residents
3. his first attempt
4. every third day
5. eleven players
6. many complaints
7. few demands

8. our daughter
9. the fifth row
10. too much noise

Exercise 3.1.4 Using each cue phrase provided, write a question with what as an interrogative adjective. Then write a response to your question.

Example:

color

Jim's new suit is bright green.

1. wristwatch
 - b.

2. blanket
 - a.
 - b.

 - b.

- 7 breakfast menu
 - a.
 - b. Follow the same directions, but write your questions with whose as an interrogative adjective.

- 8 jewelry
 - a.
 - b.

- 9 Cuban relatives
 - a.
 - b.

10 coin purse

- a.
- b

Proper adjectives and nouns used as adjectives

Proper adjectives are words that are proper nouns but act as modifiers of other nouns. Since proper nouns are capitalized, capitalization is also required when they are used as adjectives. A large category of proper adjectives comprises words that come from country or language names and that can be used both attributively and predicatively. Here are some examples:

1. I love Italian food.
2. Is French champagne the best?
3. He said the American cars are less expensive.
4. I believe this drawing is Japanese.

The same need for capitalization applies to proper names; however, proper names tend to be used only attributively. For example:

1. We read a Shakespearean play.
2. The Hilton mansion is hidden by trees.
3. The Bush administration ended in 2009
4. isn't that a Streisand song?

Many other nouns can also act as modifiers. If they are not proper nouns, they do not need to be capitalized and can be used only attributively. For example:

1. Several party gifts were identical.
2. The wedding guests were starting to get tipsy
3. I think I lost my credit card.

Exercise 3.1.5 Using the noun cues provided, write original sentences with the nouns functioning as adjectives.

Example:

Ford There's a Ford dealership over there.

1. Elizabethan
2. divorce
3. Kennedy
4. recreation
5. chemistry
6. faculty

7. White House

8. movie

9. baseball

10. Jack London

3.1.6 Infinitives

In some cases, an infinitive can function as an adjective. The infinitive usually immediately follows the noun or pronoun it modifies. For example:

1. This is always a fun show to watch.
2. We still haven't found anyone to hire for this position.
3. Professor Keller's class would be a great one to take.

Exercise 3.1.6 Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate infinitive.

Example:

This is a difficult book to read.

We have several new plants

Do you have any new music

This is really something

Do you have any money

Maria still has several letters

Using the infinitives that follow as adjectives, write original sentences.

6 to develop

7 to clean up

8 to grade

9 to defend

10 to be praised

3.2 Using adverbs

Adverbs and Adjective

Adjectives and adverbs are both essential parts of speech in English, but they serve different functions in a sentence. Understanding their differences is crucial for effective communication.

- Definitions and Functions

- Adjectives: These words describe or modify nouns and pronouns. They provide additional information about a noun's characteristics, such as its quality, quantity, or state. For example:

- * The happy child (describing the child).

- * A red apple (describing the apple).

- Adverbs: These words modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs. They typically provide information about how, when, where, or to what extent an action occurs. For example:

- * *She runs quickly (modifying the verb "runs").

- * He is very tall (modifying the adjective "tall").

- Key Differences

Aspect	Adjectives	Adverbs
What they modify	Nouns and pronouns	Verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs
Questions answered	What kind?", "How many?"	"How?", "When?", "Where?", "To what extent?"
Form	Often do not have a specific ending	Many adverbs end in "-ly" (e.g., quickly, softly)
Position in sentence	Usually precede the noun they modify (e.g., the blue sky)	Can appear in various positions (e.g., quickly ran, ran quickly)

- *Common Confusions Some words can function as both adjectives and adverbs, depending on their use in a sentence. For example:

fast:

- Adjective: The fast car won the race.

- Adverb: The car drove fast[13].

Adverbs modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs. They can be individual words, phrases, or clauses.

3.2.1 Adverb types and forms

There is more than one type of adverb. This chapter provides you with information on adverbs of manner, time, frequency, degree, and place, as well as adverbs that provide a comment on a situation.

Individual adverbs are formed simply by adding the suffix -ly to an adjective. Naturally, the English rules of spelling apply; for example, a final y is changed to i when an adverb is formed (happy → happily). Let's look at some example adjectives and their adverbial formation

careful	carefully
quick	quickly
simple	simply

A few adverbs are identical to their adjectival counterparts. For example:

ADJECTIVE	Adverb
early	early fast	fast
late	late

Adjectives

Adjectives that describe certain increments of time look like adverbs but are true adjectives. For example:

1. We're paid on an hourly basis.
2. I take a daily vitamin supplement.
3. Grandma has a weekly appointment with her doctor.
4. Your monthly salary is going to be increased.
5. My yearly physical exam always makes me nervous.

Still other adjectives that look like adverbs are not related to the ones that describe increments of time. Examples are deadly, early, lively, and only

When an adverb is used in the comparative or superlative, the suffix -ly is generally not added. However, if the comparative and superlative are formed with more and most, the suffix -ly is added.

passive	comparative	Superlative quickly	quicker	(the) quickest
softly	softer	(the) softest
well	better	(the) best
awkwardly	more awkwardly	most awkwardly
beautifully	more beautifully	most beautifully carefully	more carefully	most carefully

1. Don't confuse late with lately. Both are adverbs, but they have different meanings.

2. The girls arrived late.
3. the opposite of early
4. He's been rather moody lately

3.2.2 Adverbs of manner

Adverbs of manner form a large category. They tell how something is done. Consider the following sentences:

Martin drove slowly.	How did he drive? Slowly.
I carefully removed the battery.	How did I remove the battery? Carefully.
She kissed the baby gently.	How did she kiss the baby? Gently.

Adverbs of manner can be individual words or phrases. Let's look at some of these:

INDIVIDUAL WORDS	PHRASES
badly	in anger
politely	with a sly grin
sarcastically	with great sadness

Adverbs of manner

Adverbs of manner tend to follow the predicate of a sentence.

subject + predicate + adverb of manner
 Bill + spoke to her + angrily

1. The team played badly.
2. He tried to speak politely.
3. She gave them the news with great sadness.
4. om began to shout in anger.

3.2.3 Adverbs of time

Adverbs such as now, still, yesterday, just, finally, and Sunday tell when something occurred. These adverbs of time are part of a category that includes individual words, phrases, and clauses. For example:

individual words	PHRASES	Clauses
finally	during the exam	after the game ended
recently	in the spring	I got on the bus
today	on Monday before	since she arrived here

Adverb of time

Adverbs of time can introduce a sentence or follow it.

subject + predicate + adverb of time

He + left for work + at seven.

adverb of time + subject + predicate

At seven + he + left for work.

1. Recently, I bought a new laptop.
2. I bought a new laptop recently.
3. During the exam. Tina began to feel ill.
4. Tina began to feel ill during the exam.
5. Before I got on the bus, I realized I had lost my ticket.
6. I realized I had lost my ticket before I got on the bus.

Exercise 3.2.1 Using each set of words and phrases provided, write a sentence with the adverb of manner in the appropriate position.

Example:

men / drive / carefully / mountains

The men had to drive carefully through the mountains.

1. children / run / school / with joy
2. baritone / sing / better / soprano
3. brother / lounge / lazily / sofa / TV
4. Michael / show / car / with great pride
5. she / act / responsibly / accident
6. woman / mutter / weakly / that / ill
7. professor / congratulate / with a bit of sarcasm
8. eight-year-old / play / beautifully
9. little James / recite / capably / bow
10. Ellen/slap/with rage

Exercise 3.2.2 Using each adverb of time provided, write two original sentences: one in which the adverb introduces the action, and one in which it follows it.

Example:

recently

Recently, I found an old picture of Dad.

I found an old picture of Dad recently.

1. during the storm
 - a.
 - b.
2. yesterday
 - a.
 - b.
3. on the weekend
 - a.
 - b.
4. soon
 - a.
 - b.
5. next Friday
 - a.
 - b.
6. in time
 - a.

10. before I studied English

3.2.4 Adverbs of frequency

Adverbs of frequency tell how often something occurs. They can be individual words or phrases. For example:

INDIVIDUAL WORDS	PHRASES
never	at times
sometimes	in the rarest of moments
usually	with great frequency

When an adverb of frequency is an individual word, it tends to stand just before the verb. If it is a phrase, it usually can either introduce the sentence or follow it. Let's look at some example sentences:

1. We rarely stay out very late
2. My sister often invites her friends over to listen to music.
3. At times, I just want to drop everything and go out.
4. Mr. Johnson showed up at our door with great regularity

Adverbs of degree

Adverbs of degree tell to what extent something is done. Some of the most commonly used adverbs of degree are listed here:

adequately	perfectly
almost	practically
entirely	profoundly
extremely	really
greatly	strongly
highly	totally hugely	tremendously
immensely	very moderately	virtually partially

The adverbs in this category are used to modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs. The position of the adverb in a sentence is determined by the word it modifies:

- Verbs
 - The children enjoyed the circus immensely.
 - The lawyer strongly advocated suing the company
- Adjectives
 - She was an extremely beautiful woman.
 - Bill had become profoundly depressed.
- Adverbs
 - They sang really badly.
 - The project was progressing moderately well

Exercise 3.2.3 Rewrite the following sentences with an appropriate adverb of frequency.

Example:

She spoke with John

She never spoke with John.

1. We supported our troops fighting overseas
2. Larry had to work on the weekend.

3. I planned to take art courses at the college
4. Do you work at the new plant in the suburbs?
5. Martin renews his subscription to this magazine
6. We drink coffee with breakfast.
7. Did your parents live in Europe?
8. My sister and I baked a cake or cookies.
9. Jim and Ellen went to a dance.
10. Have you thought of becoming a doctor?

Exercise 3.2.4 Write an original sentence using each adverb of degree and the accompanying verb, adjective, or adverb provided Example:
very strong My cousin Jake is a very strong man.

1. highly emotional
2. totally irrelevant
3. recommend highly
4. immensely proudly
5. hugely successful
6. weep profoundly
7. really stubbornly
8. really stubborn
9. entirely false
10. partially true

Adverbs of place

Adverbs of place tell where an action occurs. Some of these adverbs are single words. For example:

abroad	inside
anywhere	somewhere
downstairs	there
here	underground

Other adverbs of place appear in phrase form, particularly in prepositional phrases.

alongside the road	next door
at home	on the hearth
in the bedroom	over there

Let's look at some example sentences:

1. They lived abroad for five years.
2. They were working somewhere on a secret project
3. Jack was making up the bed in the bedroom.
4. We spend a lot of time at home.

Exercise 3.2.5 Using each of the adverb cues provided once, write two original sentences.

Example:

here / in the garden

They stopped here for a bite to eat

wanted to take a nap in the garden

1. there / on the roof

(a)

(b)

2. outside / next door

(a)

(b)

3. anywhere / over the mantle

(a)

(b)

4. upstairs / in a small box

(a)

(b)

5. underground / beyond the river

(a)

(b)

3.2.5 Adverbs that make a comment

Some adverbs make a comment on a situation. They identify the speaker's or writer's viewpoint or opinion on the subject matter of a sentence. Some commonly used comment or viewpoint adverbs follow:

bravely	presumably carelessly	seriously
certainly	simply
clearly	stupidly
cleverly	surely
confidentially	technically definitely	theoretically
disappointingly	thoughtfully
foolishly	truthfully
generously	happily
kindly	naturally
obviously	personally
unbelievably	undoubtedly
(un)fortunately	(un) luckily wisely	wrongly.

When adverbs of this category are used in context, they show the degree to which the speaker or writer agrees or disagrees with a statement. These adverbs can also show disapproval or skepticism. Let's look at some example sentences:

She clearly has no understanding of the topic.	The speaker has doubts about her understanding.
Theoretically, the project should be completed by May.	The speaker is skeptical that the completion date can be met.
Wisely, he chose to drop out of the competition.	The speaker believes the decision to drop out was a good one.

Some adverbs of this type are placed only at the beginning of the sentence. For example:

- Confidentially, I think that Martha is being dishonest.
- Presumably, the storm is going to let up and we'll be able to leave.
- Happily, the child was found unharmed.

Certain of these adverbs can either introduce the sentence or follow the subject. For example:

- Naturally, I thought I had done the right thing.
- I naturally thought I had done the right thing.
- Certainly, Jean understands why you can't go tonight.
- Jean certainly understands why you can't go tonight.
- Technically, that's wrong.
- That's technically wrong.

Be careful with the adverb happily. It is both an adverb of manner and an adverb of viewpoint or comment. If it tells how something is done, it is an adverb of manner.

Tina spoke happily about her engagement.

If it expresses a point of view, suggesting that the subject matter of the sentence is good news, then the adverb is one of viewpoint or comment.

Happily, the man found his wallet and could buy the tickets.

Exercise 3.2.6 Rewrite each of the following sentences twice: first placing the adverb provided in parentheses at the beginning of the sentence, and then placing it after the subject.

Example:

(obviously)

The blizzard is worse than expected. Obviously, the blizzard is worse than expected.

The blizzard obviously is worse than expected.

1. (surely) You don't believe his story.
a.
b.
2. (undoubtedly) The man is a genius.
a.
b.
3. (personally) I feel I can place my trust in this woman.
a.
b.
4. (presumably) Mr. Lee has a wonderful new job in Boston.
a.
b.
5. (cleverly) Daniel found a seat next to the pretty girl from Korea.
a.

3.2.6 Adverb placement in a sentence

Adverbs tend to be placed in a specific position in a sentence. This is merely a tendency, however, and some adverbs are more flexible and make sense in more than one position. In some cases, the position of an adverb in a sentence is determined by what element is stressed or by the actual function of the adverb. Also, some adverbs can be used in more than one way. For example:

Disappointingly, Mark received another bad grade.	adverb of viewpoint introducing the sentence
Bill disappointingly missed making a goal.	adverb of viewpoint following the subject
She gave a disappointingly weak response.	adverb of degree modifying an adjective

Following are some general rules for determining adverb placement in a sentence:

Adverbs of manner

- Adverbs of manner, adverbs of time, and adverbs of place stand after the verb or the predicative expression at the end of the sentence.

subject + verb + manner/time/place

1. The boys stared glumly at the scoreboard. adverb of manner
2. They'll arrive in town next week. adverb of time
3. Phillip stood near the door. adverb of place

Adverbs of frequency

- Adverbs of frequency are placed before the main verb in a sentence.

subject + frequency + verb

1. Jack often visits us when he's in town.
2. She rarely spoke of life in her village.

An exception is that if the sentence contains an auxiliary verb, an adverb of frequency usually follows that auxiliary.

1. Maria has never been to Canada.
2. My dad will usually cry at a sad movie.
3. You should regularly floss your teeth.

Also, if the verb to be is used as the main verb of a clause, an adverb of frequency will follow that verb.

1. She was seldom in class.
2. You are always the best musician in the orchestra.

Adverbs of degree

- Adverbs of degree follow the verb or verb phrase they modify-but if they modify an adjective or another adverb, they are placed before them.

1. The good news about Dad's health pleased them tremendously.
2. He had a profoundly infected wound.
3. They had to drive really slowly.

- modified verb

- Adverbs of viewpoint or comment commonly begin the sentence though, some can follow the subject. For example:

* viewpoint + subject + verb

1. Wisely, they left the stalled car and walked to town. modified adjective
2. Undoubtedly, you have no confidence in yourself. modified adverb

* subject + viewpoint + verb

1. She clearly has no intention of paying me back.
2. Bob obviously overslept again.

The explanations of adverb placement in this chapter have been qualified by words such as commonly used or tendency, because there can be exceptions to the rules. The rules are not finite. One frequent exception to the rules is the placement of an adverb at the beginning of a sentence, rather than in its normal position, for emphasis. For example:

1. Now you finally come up with an answer to my question!
2. Rarely do I ever watch such television programs!
3. Sometimes I think about my days back on the farm.

Exercise 3.2.7 Write original sentences using both of the adverb cues provided. Note that one adverb in each pair is an adverb of viewpoint or comment, while the other is of another type.

Example:

confidentially

really Confidentially, I think that's a really poor idea.

1. clearly / usually
2. foolishly/last week
3. bravely / very
4. fortunately/sometimes
5. personally/ really

Rewrite each sentence that follows three times, using the three adverbs provided in parentheses in their appropriate positions.

Example 3.2.8 She bought a pretty sweater.

(naturally / on Monday/really) Naturally, she bought a pretty sweater.

She bought a pretty sweater on Monday. She bought a really pretty sweater.

6 I ran to the window and saw Bill. (quickly/fortunately / suddenly)

(a)

(b)

(c)

7 Juanita destroyed the strange object. (wisely/immediately / very)

(a)

(b)

(c)

8 They carried her into the living room. (after she fainted/ carefully / around five o'clock)

(a)

(b)

(c)

9 The old men sat around the little table. (presumably / extremely / silently)

(a)

(b)

(c)

10 Her left leg is broken. (seriously/once again / in two places)

(a)

(b)

(c)

3.3 Present and past participles

There are two types of participles: present participles and past participles. Both types can be used as modifiers.

- Present participles

A present participle is formed by adding -ing to the infinitive of a verb while dropping the particle word to:

1. to go $\mapsto$ going
2. to help $\mapsto$ helping
3. to be $\mapsto$ being
4. to develop $\mapsto$ developing

Present and past

Although present participles are used attributively, they have a special characteristic: they can modify a noun by standing either before it or after it. If the present participle stands after the noun, it is in a sense an elliptical relative clause. Here is an illustration:

The weeping girl was Tim's sister. The girl weeping was Tim's sister.	The girl who was weeping Tim's sister.
The spinning top made me dizzy. The top spinning made me dizzy.	The top that was spinning made me dizzy.
The running boys were scared. The boys running were scared.	The boys who were running scared.

Present participles can also introduce a phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun in a sentence. For example:

- Running down the hill, Jim tripped and sprained his ankle.
- Sitting alone in the dark, she suddenly had a feeling of dread.

Phrases or clauses that modify the noun or pronoun they precede can indicate a new tense or a modified meaning by use of an auxiliary. Let's look at some examples:

1. Being accused of a crime, Jim was forced to be interrogated. present passive
2. Having been invited to the party, Juan went out to buy a new suit. past passive
3. Being able to sing well, Nancy was asked to join the choir. modal auxiliary Present participles cannot be used predicatively, but they can be used to modify a noun in the predicate. Present participles in a predicate can stand before the noun they modify or after the noun they modify, and the verb in the sentence can be either a linking verb or a transitive verb. In both usages, they are replacements for relative clauses. First let's look at some examples of present participles that stand before the noun they modify in the predicate:

This is a developing story.	story that is developing
The woman observed the slowly moving caravan.	caravan that is moving slowly
That was a frightening experience!	experience that was frightening

With the phrase there is/there are, the modifying present participle stands after the noun. The phrase there is/there are can be in any tense. For example:

There really was no story developing	story that was developing
There is a storm brewing.	storm that is brewing
There will be three trained bears dancing	bears that will be dancing

When the verb in the sentence is transitive, this same position following the noun is possible for a present participle.

1. They were recording the professor speaking.
2. The doctor watched her eyes rapidly blinking.
3. I felt my heart beating wildly in my chest.

Exercise 3.3.1 Fill in each blank with an appropriate present-participle modifier.

Example:

The pouting boy had just been punished.

1. hyenas are native to Africa.
2. My parents want a new table.
3. All night long, I listened to the old clock.
4. She said nothing
5. The boys over the soccer ball are bullies.
6. my uncle collected a variety of artworks.
7. What a large. vessel!
8. clouds moved swiftly overhead.
9. There won't be another train. soon.
10. There were numerous rumors.

3.3.1 Past participles

Past participles can be used as adjectives and are in the same verbal form as the perfect tenses, but the auxiliary have is omitted.

to break broken to write written to arrest arrested
to deliver delivered

In many cases, past participles—just like present participles—can modify a noun by standing before it or after it. When it stands after the noun, the past participle is like an elliptical relative clause, but the verb in that clause is in the passive voice. Let's look at some examples:

1. The arrested man tried to flee.
2. The man who was arrested tried to flee.
3. The man arrested tried to flee
4. The stolen money was retrieved.
5. The money stolen was retrieved.
6. The burned books were in Latin.
7. The books burned were in Latin.

Past participles can also introduce a phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun in a sentence. For example:

1. Discovered in southern Mexico, the village had apparently been abandoned years ago
2. Shaken by the clap of thunder, they left the tent and went in the house

In contrast to present participles, past participles can be used as predicative adjectives after linking verbs.

- The clock was broken, so Tim placed it in a box in the attic.
- Their vacation plans were ruined.
- His voice finally sounded rested.

Past participles can also be used to modify a noun in the predicate. Past participles in the predicate can stand before the noun they modify or after the noun they modify, and the verb in the sentence can be either a linking verb or a transitive verb. In both usages, they are replacements for relative clauses. First let's look at some examples of past participles that stand before the noun they modify:

The athlete has a well-developed body.	body that was well developed
This is a completed version of the story.	version that was completed
Her frightened face told me everything.	face that was frightened

With the phrase there is/there are, the modifying past participle stands after the noun. The phrase there is/there are can be used in any tense. For example:

1. There was a message stuffed in his pocket
2. Will there be new invitations sent out?
3. At that tragic moment, there wasn't a single word spoken

Exercise 3.3.2 Fill in each blank with an appropriate past-participle modifier.

Example:

Each written exercise is worth ten points.

1. _____ documents are of no help.
2. The damaged dock is now _____
3. _____ James turned away and began to sob.
4. I think the meat loaf smells _____
5. Who took the _____ garments from this room?
6. I have the valley _____ on this map.
7. _____ Susan let out a little shriek and then smiled in embarrassment
8. A _____ pot never boils. (proverb)
9. Where is the little boy _____ atone in the park?
10. This is the manuscript _____ in that old chest.

Exercise 3.3.3 Using each verb cue provided, write two original sentences: one with the verb cue written as a present participle, and one with the verb cue written as a past participle.

Example:

read

This reading material is meant for adults.

The previously read statement is full of exaggerations.

1. write
 - (a)
 - (b)
2. break
 - (a)
 - (b)
3. charge
 - (a)
 - (b)
4. leak
 - (a)
 - (b)

Follow the same directions, but write one original sentence with an introductory phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun and is introduced by a present participle.

Example:

follow

Following the paths of the maze, the man became disoriented.

5 lie

(a)

(b)

6 hope

(a)

(b)

7 drive

(a)

(b)

Follow the same directions, but write one original sentence with an introductory phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun and is introduced by a past participle.

Example:

develop

Developed for the space program, this ceramic is now in public use

8 place

(a)

(b)

9 beat

(a)

(b)

10 drive

(a)

(b)

3.3.2 Adverbs and participles

Since participles can be used as adjectives, and adjectives can be modified by adverbs, it is logical that adverbs can modify participles. This is true of both present and past participles. However, because participles are derived from verbs, only those adverbs that can modify a verb can also modify a participle. Let's look at a few examples with present participles.

1. He speaks slowly.

2. I listened to the man speaking slowly.
3. The satellite orbits regularly.
4. They observed the regularly orbiting satellite
5. She stared coldly at him.
6. The woman staring coldly at him was lane.

Adverbs

Adverbs modify past participles in a similar manner, but the verb that becomes a past participle modifier is in the passive voice. For example:

1. The boy was rarely punished.
2. The rarely punished boy was arrogant.
3. The words had been neatly printed.
4. The neatly printed words were ad
5. It was calculated properly. to Santa.
6. He showed the figures calculated properly

Since adverbs can be prepositional phrases, prepositional phrases can also modify present and past participles used as modifiers. This occurs most frequently when the adverb modifier follows the noun or pronoun it modifies.

1. The man standing near the door isn't one of our guests.
2. Some qualified for the job were a bit too young

Exercise 3.3.4 Add an appropriate adverb that modifies the present or past participle in each phrase that follows.

Example:

the slowly spinning top; a window shattered in the storm

1. the grazing cattle
2. the twirling dancers
3. someone behaving
4. a shed leaning to one Sid
5. the beaming parents
6. a tuned instrument
7. the copied text
8. a chair propped

9. the n-mo.

10. words spoke

Exercise 3.3.5 Write original sentences using the following participles and phrases as modifiers.

Example:

running along the bank of the river Running along the bank of the river, Tim slipped and fell in the water.

1. fully rested
2. giggling
3. merrily strumming on an old banjo
4. having been voted president
5. collected over the years
6. suggested by a professor
7. sputtering nervously
8. driven to madness
9. having to remain at home
10. vigorously bubbling

3.4 Using infinitives

Using infinitives

In order to write effectively in English, it is necessary to understand some important verb forms. One of them is the infinitive.

- Verbs that combine with infinitives

Infinitives are considered the base form of a verb. They are composed of the verb and the particle word to: to look, to run, to see, and so on. When used as verbs, infinitives can follow certain auxiliaries.

- auxiliary + infinitive
- to be able + to see

For example:

1. I am supposed to be home by ten
2. You ought to hurry.
3. She has to wait.

Also, certain other words often require an infinitive usage after them and sometimes are preceded by a noun or pronoun object. Some of the most commonly used ones are listed here:

agree	fail	prepare
appear	forget	pretend
ask	hesitate	promise
beg	hope	refuse
care	learn	regret
claim	manage	remember

Let's look at their use in a few example sentences

- She agreed to work on a solution with me.
- I hesitate to think about what might happen.
- Did you ask Tim to sign up for the same class?

3.4.1 Functions of an infinitive

When an infinitive is used as a verbal, it is functioning not as a verb but as a different part of speech. Infinitives can be used as nouns, adjectives, and adverbs. When an infinitive is used as a noun, it occurs in some of the structures of all other nouns: the subject of a sentence, the direct object of a sentence, a predicate nominative, the object of a preposition, an appositive, and a modifier.

Subject of a sentence

Let's look at some infinitives used as subjects. Note that infinitives as subjects can be part of a phrase.

- subject infinitive + verb + complement
 - To study in Europe is a dream of mine
 - To become a leader was her greatest ambition.
 - To learn a foreign language is part of a good education

Exercise 3.4.1 Complete each sentence that follows by filling in the blank with an appropriate phrase for the infinitive provided.

Example:

To work for this company is really a privilege.

- | | |
|---------------|----------------------------|
| 1. To prepare | will take a long time. |
| 2. To attend | should be your goal. |
| 3. To sleep | will not be tolerated. |
| 4. To play | is just a dream of hers. |
| 5. To die | young warrior's wish. |
| 6. To camp | gave us a lot of pleasure. |
| 7. To serve | became his destiny. |
| 8. To develop | as been a difficult task. |
| 9. To climb | become her obsession. |
| 10. To write | as easy as it sounds. |

3.4.2 Direct object of a sentence

Infinitives can appear as direct objects as follows:

- subject + transitive verb + direct object infinitive
1. She loved to write poetry.
 2. I finally arranged to study abroad.
 3. He won't attempt to climb that mountain again.

Remember that some auxiliaries are followed by an infinitive that does not include the particle word to. For example: He must run. They can sing. Following the verb to help, the same thing occurs with infinitives that are used as direct objects. Let's look at an example:

1. Can you help lift the sorta?
2. Can you help to lift the sofa?

Exercise 3.4.2 Complete each sentence by filling in the blank with an appropriate phrase following the infinitive provided as a direct object.

Example:

John hated to waste time at the mall.

1. Do you want to wait _____ ?
2. The girls attempted to hide _____ .
3. Mark often forgot to lock _____ .
4. Please help me find _____ .
5. Jake wanted to paint _____ .

Now complete each of the following sentences with an original infinitive phrase.

- 6 Jim and Jerry helped me _____ .
- 7 I really need _____ .
- 8 Who wanted _____ ?
- 9 Don't try _____ .
- 10 Did you remember _____ as the subject of the sentence.

Exercise 3.4.3 Complete each of the following sentences appropriately, using the infinitive phrase provided as the subject of the sentence.

Example:

To play the piano is a goal of mine.

1. To live a clean and honorable life
2. To visit Rome
3. To become rich
4. To repair racing cars
5. To travel into space
6. To study physics in Japan
7. To end pollution
8. To become a citizen
9. To earn my degree
10. To see my mother healthy again

Passive-voice infinitives can be used in the same way as other infinitives. For example:

- To be elected to high office was her goal.
- John's only wish is to be respected by his peers.

3.4.3 Predicate nominative

It's also common for some infinitives to function as a predicate nominative. For instance:

1. Her first duty was to protect her children.
 2. My goal is to be appointed chairman of the committee
 3. Is your purpose here to ruin this project or to help improve it?
- Object of a preposition

Likewise, infinitive phrases can sometimes be the object of a preposition. For instance:

1. I want nothing but to see my children happy.
2. Barry learned nothing in the class except to cheat.

Appositive

When an infinitive phrase is used as an appositive, it can appear in either one of two positions in a sentence: immediately after the word or phrase that it explains or describes, or at the end of a sentence that begins with an impersonal it. Here are examples of the first type of apposition:

1. My goal, to study in Mexico, is about to become a reality.
2. Mary's suggestion, to collect aluminum cans along the road, was quickly rejected.

The notion, to dig a tunnel under the ocean, is preposterous.

An appositive at the end of a sentence is sometimes called a delayed appositive. It is used to describe the impersonal subject of a sentence it. For example:

1. It hurt me a lot to see her with another man.
2. It would give us great pleasure to see you win that prize
3. It seemed naive to hope for peace at this time

A delayed infinitive can be identified by testing it as the subject of the sentence in place of it. If the infinitive subject of the sentence make sense, it is a delayed infinitive.

1. To see her with another man hurt me a lot
2. To see you win that prize would give us great pleasure.
3. To hope for peace at this time seemed naive.

Exercise 3.4.4 Using the infinitive phrase provided, write three original sentences: one with the phrase used as a predicate nominative, one with the phrase used as an appositive, and one with the phrase used as a delayed appositive.

Example:

to visit Alaska

His only desire was to visit Alaska.

Jane's goal, to visit Alaska, would become a reality.

It became impossible to visit Alaska.

1. to marry Jack

(a)

(b)

(c)

2. to become a famous actor

(a)

(b)

(c)

3. to understand grammar better

(a)

(b)

(c)

4. to run in the marathon

(a)

(b)

(c)

5. not to become conceited

(a)

(b)

(c)

3.4.4 Modifier

Used as modifiers, infinitives can act as both adjectives and adverbs. When an infinitive modifies a noun or pronoun, it is used as an adjective.

Jill is the only girl in our class to remain single.	modifies girl
Mr. Lee is the one to see about getting a job here.	modifies one
This is the only road to take.	modifies road

When an infinitive acts as an adverb, it modifies a verb and usually answers the question why? You can test this adverbial usage by adding the phrase in order to to the infinitive. If the phrase makes sense, it is used adverbially. Let's look at some example sentences:

1. Jonathan came to help with our
2. move into the new apartment. in order to help
3. Ms. Smith phoned to apologize.
4. The applicant is waiting to see the boss.
5. in order to apologize
6. in order to see the boss

Exercise 3.4.5 In the sentences that follow, change the underlined word or phrase to any two appropriate infinitives or infinitive phrases.

Example:

Frank is really a man to be admired

1. The little boy cried .
2. The documents are on my desk.
3. Her parents came along
4. Ms. Garcia is the person
5. The guard gave the signa
6. They decided to stop at a motel
7. We came by way of another street
8. Is there a better way ?
9. She applied for a job
10. The issue is how we find enough money for a new house.

Exercise 3.4.6 Write an original sentence using each of the phrases provided.

Example:

person to watch The only person to watch is the one with experience.

1. to enjoy the music
2. to be supported
3. to locate
4. to applaud
5. to be contradicted
6. to spell

7. to forgive
8. to be forgiven
9. to eliminate
10. to judge

Exercise 3.4.7 In the sentences that follow, change the underlined word or phrase to any two appropriate infinitives or infinitive phrases.

Example:

A study session can be boring.

To read Latin texts can be boring.

To paint a white wall can be boring.

1. She arrived early from work.

(a)

(b)

2. Her idea, a network of computers, was only slowly accepted.

(a)

3. Music gradually became Tom's passion.

(a)

(b)

4. There was nothing to do but this.

(a)

(b)

5. My only choice was total capitulation

(a)

(b)

3.5 Using gerunds

Another important verbal is the gerund. It is formed just like a present participle: the suffix -ing is added to the infinitive, while the particle word to is omitted to go → going to sing → singing

Present participles, as opposed to gerunds, are used to form the progressive tenses and as modifiers:

- Progressive tense showing an incomplete action

I am studying for a big exam.

She was planning on a vacation to Ireland.

- Modifier

The swirling waters meant danger ahead.

The man following us looked sinister.

My only choice was total capitulation.

3.5.1 Functions of the gerund

Gerunds have a different use in sentences. They act as nouns, and they can be part of any grammatical structure that a noun can: subject, predicate nominative, object, modifier, possessive, object of a preposition, or appositive.

When a gerund is used as the subject of a sentence, it can be a single word or part of a phrase. For example:

Spinning is a popular exercise at my health club.

Working for the railroad meant job security

The same is true if the gerund or gerund phrase is in the predicate nominative. Jim's passion soon became singing.

Their daily chore was washing the dishes after dinner.

Exercise 3.5.1 *Using the phrase provided to form a gerund, write one sentence with the gerund serving as the subject, and then write a second sentence with the same gerund serving as the predicate nominative. Example:

to have a party

Having a party can be a lot of work.

Her only thought was having a party for him.

1. to borrow some money

a.

b.

2. to collect stamps

a.

b.

3. to travel around New England

a.

b.

4. to complain

- a.
- b.

5. to solve her money problems

- a.
- b.

6. to sweat

- a.
- b.

7. to jog in the park

- a.
- b.

8. to be on the team

- a.
- b.

9. to cry

- a.
- b.

10. taao avoid an accident

- a.
- b.

Gerunds can be used as direct objects following many verbs. Just about any verb that can have a noun or pronoun direct object can also have a gerund as its direct object. Let's look at some examples:

Noun object	Gerund object
My cousin hated classical music.	My cousin hated sleeping on the sofa.
Did Mom mention Bill's promotion?	Did Mom mention meeting the mayor?
June loved the art museum.	June loved baking.

It is possible to use a gerund as an indirect object, but that kind of structure can sound awkward and occurs only rarely. For example:

You have strong legs. You should give running another chance.

- Placement of not

You have to use some caution when negating a sentence that contains a gerund serving as a direct object, because the meaning of the sentence is altered by the placement of the adverb not. If you negate the verb, the action of the sentence is negated. If you negate the gerund, you are suggesting an alternative to the meaning of the gerund. When you negate a gerund, the adverb not should be placed directly in front of the gerund: not singing, not following, and so on. Let's look at specific examples showing the difference of meaning that occurs by the placement of not:

Positive	Int considering driving to Denver.
Negated verb	I'm not considering driving to Denver.	I have no plan to go to Denver.
Negated object	Im considering not driving to Denver.	Instead, I'm thinking of flying there.
Positive	John likes talking on the phone.
Negated verb	John doesn't like talking on the phone.	He prefers talking face-to-face.
Negated object	John likes not talking on the phone.	He's enjoying avoiding his former habit of talking on the phone.
Positive	She preferred wearing business attire.
Negated verb	She didn't prefer wearing business attire.	Someone misunderstood what she preferred to wear.
Negated object	She preferred not wearing business attire.	Her preference was casual attire.

Exercise 3.5.2 Using the phrases provided, first write a positive sentence with the gerund serving as a direct object. Then rewrite the sentence with the gerund negated by not

Example:

watching the game

Jim mentioned watching the game today.

Jim mentioned not watching the game today

1. washing the car

b.

2. vacationing in Florid

a.

b.

3. visiting Uncle Charlie

b.

4. getting up at dawn

a.

b.

5. spending the weekend at the cabin

b.

3.5.2 Gerunds versus present participles

When gerunds are used as modifiers, remember that they are nouns used as modifiers. There is a difference between a gerund and how it modifies, on the one hand, and a present participle and how it modifies. Here's how it breaks down:

- Present participle

The man planning the party is my uncle. the man who is planning $\Rightarrow$ present participle

The scratching dog has fleas. the dog that is scratching $\Rightarrow$ present participle

The baking cakes smell delicious. he cakes that are baking $\Rightarrow$ present participle

- Gerund

The planning department met at four. the department that does the planning (noun) $\Rightarrow$ gerund

1. That scratching noise is very annoying. $\Rightarrow$ The noise sounds like scratching (noun)
2. This is a baking dish $\Rightarrow$ a dish for baking (noun) - gerund

Exercise 3.5.3 Add the suffix -Ing to the verb provided, and write any appropriate sentence using that word as a present participle. Then write another appropriate sentence using that word as a gerund.

Example:

take

We are taking a vacation to Montana.

Taking final exams is stressful.

1. to hike

(a)

(b)

2. to require

(a)

(b)

3. to suggest

(a)

(b)

4. to employ

(a)

(b)

5. to imitate

(a)

(b)

Follow the same directions, but now write sentences that use the present participle and the gerund as modifiers.

1. to investigate

(a)

(b)

2. to train

(a)

(b)

- Possessive constructions

Most singular English nouns form their possessive by adding an apostrophe plus s to the end of the word; for example, Jim's, the girl's. If the noun is plural, those positions are generally switched: the apostrophe follows the s; for example, the boys', the parents'. In addition, the possessive can often be formed with the preposition of; for example, of the boy, of the university. When a gerund is used in the possessive, it is possible to add an apostrophe plus s, but it is far more common to make the gerund the object of the preposition of. For example:

Possible	More likely
the burning's effect	the effect of the burning
the drowning's cause	the cause of the drowning

Since gerunds tend to describe something inanimate, the greater tendency is to use the preposition of.

Prepositions with gerunds

A long list of prepositions can be used with gerunds. Some of these prepositions are often paired with specific verbs. For instance, the correct usage is to be interested "in" and not to or from or any other preposition.

- Some verbs and adjectives are used primarily with the preposition for: grateful for, to vouch for, responsible for
- Some are used with the preposition of: capable of, guilty of, scared of
- Some are used with the preposition to: to commit to, to connect to, to dedicate to
- Some are used with the preposition with: to bore with, to finish with, to satisfy with

These are just a few examples of the large number of verbs that are accompanied by specific prepositions. Many of them can be used to form a prepositional phrase with a gerund. For example:

1. to be satisfied with the training
2. to be tired of waiting
3. exhausted from working
4. to be interested in sailing
5. to think about studying sick of struggling

When a gerund is placed in the position of an appositive, it functions like any other appositive: it gives further meaning about or describes its antecedent. A gerund acting as an appositive always stands directly after its antecedent. Unlike the case with infinitives, gerunds cannot be used as delayed appositives. For example:

1. The next step, planning for the new school year, will be headed by Jean.
2. His problem, worrying about money, can be solved by a better job.

3. Jane's reaction, laughing at my suggestion, was a real insult.

Exercise 3.5.4 Using the phrase provided, write an original sentence with the gerund serving as the object of a preposition. Then write a second sentence with the gerund used as an appositive.

Example:

about the damming of the river

The editorial was about the damming of the river.

This project, the damming of the river, has many dangers.

1. of being your assistant

(a)

(b)

2. from stopping too suddenly

(a)

(b)

3. to sunbathing and swimming

(a)

(b)

4. in razing the old church

(a)

(b)

5. by playing with matches

(a)

(b)

Infinitives and gerunds

Infinitives can be used as nouns, and gerunds are always used as nouns. In many cases, therefore, it is possible for infinitives (used as nouns) and gerunds to replace one another in sentences, with little or no change in the meaning of the sentence.

subject + verb + infinitive

subject + verb + gerund

Let's look at some example sentences:

I love to swim in a cool lake.

I love swimming in a cool lake.

She prefers to use her own money.

She prefers using her own money.

Did you start to lose weight?

Did you start losing weight?

This mutual replacement of infinitives and gerunds does not occur with all verbs. Some of the commonly used verbs that can be followed by either an infinitive or a gerund are to begin, to cease, to continue, to dread, to hate, to like, to love, to neglect, and to propose. Some verbs can be followed only by infinitives. For example:

Did you decide to buy the car? Buying cannot be used.
 She wants to help your family. Helping cannot be used.

There are other verbs that can be followed by either an infinitive or a gerund, but these combinations sometimes carry different meanings. Verbs of this type include to attempt, to forget, to hope, to mean, to regret, to remember, and to try. Let's look at some of these verbs in sentences and how their meanings vary depending on whether the infinitive or the gerund is used:

Bill forgot to park in the garage.	Bill parked in the garage, but he forgot that he did.
Bill forgot parking in the garage.	Bill parked his car somewhere else.
I remember to buy groceries.
I remember buying groceries.	Try to raise your hand, Try raising your hand.
I don't forget to buy groceries.	I'm confused, but there is a memory of buying groceries.
See if you can move your injured hand.	The teacher will call on you if you raise your hand.

Exercise 3.5.5 Complete the following sentences twice: first with an infinitive, and then with a gerund wherever possible. If a gerund cannot be used, enter "NA" (ie., not applicable). Be aware that there may be a difference in meaning between the infinitive and the gerund.

Example:

We need to start to raise money/raising money.

1. I would love
2. She always remembers
3. We need to begin
4. Tim sometimes hated
5. Did you always like
6. Don't forget
7. You should try
8. The judge neglected
9. You must immediately cease
10. The little boy continued

3.6 Idioms

Terminology is one of the important matters in all languages in the world, not only in the English language, because of its importance in obtaining the meaning in a brief, accurate and specific manner, and from this section we have dedicated a complete chapter to terminology in general, and we do not mean to talk about scientific or medical terms, but rather the terms used in speech and speech in circulation and the way they are used.

Idioms are phrases or sentences that cannot be translated literally from one language to another. They usually comprise common words used in an unexpected way, and that often results in confusion when the student of English is not aware that the words are used idiomatically.

ordinary words + unexpected usage $\implies$ idiom

Consider the following examples and what the sentences mean-not what the individual words mean:

- Keep an eye on that for me.
- You're pulling my leg!
- You can bet your bottom dollar that he's right.
- Watch that for me.
- You're joking with me!
- You can be absolutely sure that he's right.

The appropriate use of idioms and other expressions that carry an unexpected meaning can be an asset in writing good sentences. Although they require care in how they're employed, they can make sentences more interesting by providing a casual tone to a text and even a little fun.

Parts of speech used in idioms

It is not just a single part of speech that can be used idiomatically. Various parts of speech occur in idioms. This section outlines some commonly used idioms based on the part of speech they feature.

- Nouns

Many nouns are used idiomatically, and when they are, either their meaning or their function in a sentence is changed. For example: beeline She made a beeline for the library. $\implies$ She went directly to the library.

Both the subject and the object of the preposition in this idiom can change: Tom made a beeline for the exit.

bone I have a bone to pick with you. I need to discuss a problem with you.

Again, both the subject, the object of the preposition, and the tense of the verb in this idiom can change: She has a bone to pick with her boyfriend.

card Tom is a real card. Tom is very funny.

Only the subject of this idiom can change. The subjects tend to refer to males: Her husband is a real card.

dog His business soon went to the dogs. His business soon was ruined. Only the subject of this idiom can change.

tongue The answer is on the tip of my tongue. I can almost remember the answer.

The subject of the sentence, the possessive, and the tense can change in this idiom: The man's name was on the tip of her tongue.

water You're in hot water now! You're in a lot of trouble now!

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

Verbs

Let's turn to some verbs that are used idiomatically:

eat He had to eat his (own) words. He was wrong and had to admit to it.

Only the subject and accompanying possessive of this idiom can change.

feel Do you feel like going out for pizza? Do you have a desire to go out for pizza?

The subject of this idiom can change. The phrase feel like should be followed by a gerund: Did they feel like coming to my party?

keep You have to keep a stiff upper lip. You have to be brave.

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

• Adjectives

Here are some adjectives that are used idiomatically:

better → You (had) better be home on time. → A warning: Be home on time.

The subject of the sentence and the verb phrase that follows (had) better can change: We better stay home tonight.

fishy → Your story sounds fishy (to me). → Your story sounds false (to me).

The subject and the optional prepositional phrase can be changed in this idiom: His explanation sounded fishy to the judge.

hot That's a lot of hot air! → That sounds like a lie or an exaggeration!

Only the subject of this idiom can change: His story is a lot of hot air!

red These forms are just (a lot of) red tape. → These forms are just a lot of complicated (governmental) procedures.

This idiom can be used after the phrase a lot of or as a predicate nominative.

well → Our neighbors are quite well off. → Our neighbors are quite wealthy.

This idiom can be used attributively but is most frequently used predicatively: Is John really so well off? It is common to omit the word had from the expression had better. For example:

1. We had better check the time of our flight.

2. We better check the time of our flight.

• Prepositions

Next, let's look at some prepositions that are used idiomatically:

about → I was about to call him, when he arrived. → I was ready to call him, when he arrived. This meaning of about is preceded by a form of to be and followed by infinitive phrases: Jane was about to get into bed, when the phone rang.

from → You'd better start counting from scratch. → You'd better start counting from the beginning.

This idiom can be used in most sentences as a replacement for from the beginning.

in → Mary said her sister is in the family way. → Mary said her sister is pregnant.

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

on → My brother is always on the go. → My brother is always in a hurry (or busy).

Only the subject of this idiom can change.

under → I heard him say something under his breath. → I heard him say something in a whisper.

This idiom always tells how something is said.

Exercise 3.6.1 Change the underlined word or phrase in each sentence that follows to the corresponding idiom previously illustrated.

Example:

Jane didn't know she was pregnant.

in the family way

1. My cousin is always joking with me.
2. We were ready to leave, when our neighbor dropped by.
3. I always thought the John sons were so wealthy.
4. I really don't have a desire to go out tonight.
5. His reason for his behavior is just an exaggeration.
6. You can be absolutely sure that this stock will go up next week.
7. Don't stay out late.
8. I'm going to check the list again from the beginning.
9. I'm sick of all these governmental procedures!
10. One of my nephews is really funny.

Exercise 3.6.2 Write two appropriate completions to each of the following sentences containing idioms.

6. keep a stiff upper lip

7. feel like

8. in hot water

9. (had) better

10. go to the dogs

Special words and phrases

Nearly every language features "little words" or "short phrases" that are added to sentences for emphasis or to give a particular quality to a phrase. Look at the following two sentences. The only difference between the two is the final prepositional phrase in the second sentence:

1. I don't care.
2. I don't care in the least.

The addition of the phrase in the least changes the tone of the sentence from casual to emphatic and with a hint of anger. This same prepositional phrase modifies other sentences in a similar way.

At all

This section highlights other words and phrases that modify the meanings of sentences. The two little words at all when added to a negative sentence emphasize the degree of negativity. It is the adverb not that is modified by this phrase. With linking verbs, the phrase at all follows the adverb not or another negative word, or it can be placed after the predicate nominative. Let's look at some examples:

- I'm not at all pleased by this.
- Sarah wasn't at all impressed.
- He isn't at all rich.

I'm not pleased at all by this. Sarah wasn't impressed at all. He isn't rich at all. With other verbs, at all tends to be placed after the verb or verb phrase. For example:

- Bill wouldn't speak with her at all.
- I actually have no opinion about it at all.
- He didn't ask about her condition at all.

- By the way

The phrase by the way is usually added at the beginning of a sentence, although it sometimes can occur in a medial or final position. It indicates that the speaker or writer doesn't want to forget to mention something. Let's look at some sentences that illustrate this usage:

1. Bill's team won the trophy.
2. By the way, I'm on that team, too.
3. By the way, I ran into your brother last night.
4. I'll be at your party. By the way, do you mind if I bring along Tina?

- How about

How about is used to introduce a question that asks whether someone is interested in doing some thing. Consider this question: Are you interested in going to the movies? It can be restated like this: How about going to the movies? Let's look at a couple more examples:

- Mind
 - How about spending some time with Uncle Fred?
 - How about trying to save a little more money?!

This verb usually means to see after or to tend to. It can also be used to mean to pay strict attention to or to be on guard against. Yet another useful application is its meaning of to care about or to have anything against an idea or action. It is also used to say that someone has the urge or wants to do something. For example:

Do you mind if I sit here?	No, I don't mind.
Do you care that I sit here?/Do you have?	anything against my sitting here? No, I don't care./No, I have nothing against your sitting here.
I wouldn't mind having a nice cold beer right now.	I have the urge to have a cold beer right now.

- Or so

The phrase or so is a synonym for approximately or about. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

She's approximately thirty years old. → She's thirty years old or so.

The turkey weighed about twenty pounds. → The turkey weighed twenty pounds or so.

Notice that or so is positioned after the quantity it modifies.

- Really

The word really can be used in a variety of sentence types. It can serve as an adverb that means as a matter of fact or in reality. It is also commonly used to emphasize certain elements in a sentence, primarily verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs.

- Modifying verbs

I don't like that man. → I really don't like that man.

Do you want to buy that old car? → Do you really want to buy that old car?

The men had a lot of fun at the ball game. → The men really had a lot of fun at the ball game.

- Modifying adjectives

Sarah bought an expensive dress. → Sarah bought a really expensive dress.

That's a good copy of the map. → That's a really good copy of the map.

John ought some cheap wine. → John bought some really cheap wine.

- Modifying other adverbs

Granddad drove carefully. → Granddad drove really carefully.

Did they get up early? → Did they get up really early?

I never understood his motives. → I really never understood his motives.

- Should have

The valuable little phrase should have implies that something that occurred was regrettable. In the negative, it suggests that something that occurred was a mistake. The subject of this verb phrase can be most any noun or pronoun:

1. Positive

- (a) You should have called me yesterday. → It's regrettable that you didn't call.
- (b) Should I have told her about my illness? → Should I regret that I didn't tell her?
- (c) Tom should have married Marie. → It's regrettable that he didn't marry her.

2. Negative

- (a) I shouldn't have spoken to him that way. → It was a mistake for them to leave today.
- (b) They shouldn't have left today. → Jane shouldn't have gone out with Joe.
- (c) It was a mistake to speak to him that way. → It was a mistake for her to go out with Joe.

Well

The word well has more than one function in English. It is the adverb for the adjective good, and it is the adjective that means healthy and is the opposite of sick. It is also used as an interjection, but because it has idiomatic qualities, it needs to be looked at again. Well can be used to stall for a little time, often in response to a difficult or uncomfortable comment. For example:

- I expect you in my office in an hour.
- Well, let me check my calendar.
- Can you answer my question?
- Well, let me think about that for a moment.

It also introduces a sentence that expresses surprise. Although surprise can be expressed without the interjection, the addition of well provides emphasis.

1. Well, I had no idea that you'd be here today.
2. Well, I certainly didn't expect to get a speeding ticket.

In can also express impatience. Compare the following pairs of sentences:

No interjection	Interjection indicating impatience
Are you ready?	Well, are you ready?
You're going to be late again.	Well, you're going to be late again.

Exercise 3.6.4 Fill in the blank in each sentence with the word or phrase from the following list that makes the most sense: at all, by the way, how about, mind, or so, really, or should have.

2. Do you _____ understand this poem?
3. We _____ asked Aunt Louise for some financial help.
4. Did her brother _____ that you asked her out?
5. _____ it's hard for me to explain.
6. John joined the marines, and, _____ so did I.
7. I think the center of the team is seven feet tall
8. _____ going out for some dinner with me?
9. Professor Smith is a _____ refined gentleman.
10. It's none of your business

Exercise 3.6.5 Write two original sentences containing each of the words or phrases provided.

(b)

9. well

(a)

(b)

10. fell like

3.7 Short responses and interjections

Not all powerful sentences are long. Even short sentences can carry a lot of meaning, especially when they are the response to a question or statement whose meaning is understood in the reply. For instance, the individual words fine and hardly have their own meanings, but they can also stand alone as an elliptical response to a question or statement.

interjections

- What are Interjections?

Interjections are words or expressions used to convey a sudden emotion, feeling, or reaction. They are grammatically independent parts of speech that do not connect to the rest of the sentence. Interjections can be used on their own or within a sentence to add emphasis or express an exclamation.

- Types of Interjections

Primary Interjections: These are words or sounds that only function as interjections and do not have any other meaning. Examples include "ouch," "wow," and "ugh." Secondary Interjections: These are words that can also function as other parts of speech, such as nouns, verbs, or adjectives. Examples include "indeed," "oh well," and "really." Emotive Interjections: These express emotions or reactions, such as "ew" (disgust), "yay" (joy), and "yum" (enjoyment). Vocative Interjections: These are used to give commands or make requests, such as "shh" (be quiet) and "psst" (to get someone's attention).

- Functions of Interjections

Express emotions, feelings, or reactions (e.g., "Wow! That's amazing.") Emphasize a statement or exclamation (e.g., "Yes! I won the race.") Fill gaps in conversation or indicate hesitation (e.g., "Um, I'm not sure.") Insert a comment or explanation within a sentence (e.g., "I, well, I don't know.")

- Interjections and Punctuation

Interjections are often followed by exclamation marks to emphasize strong emotions or reactions (e.g., "Ouch!") Mild interjections may be followed by commas (e.g., "Oh, I see.") Interjections used as questions are followed by question marks (e.g., "Huh? What did you say?")

1. You'll have to stay home tonight and study.
2. Fine. (Fine, I accept the fact that I must stay home and study.)
3. I suppose you're going to vote for Laura as chairperson.
4. Hardly. (Your supposition is hardly correct. // I'll vote for Marie.)

Short responses

Many individual words and brief phrases can be used as short responses to questions or statements. Consider the following list:

Amazing!, Of course., Apparently., Don't mention it., Outstanding!, Really?, Excellent!, Terrific!, For heaven's sake!, That depends., Fortunately., That's great., I have no idea., That's hard to believe., Impossible., Unbelievable!, Incredible., Unfortunately, no/not., It can't be (true)!, What a pity., Naturally., What do you mean?, Not at all, You're kidding/not serious., Obviously., You're welcome.

Naturally, words and phrases such as these do not have a singular use. They can respond to numerous questions or statements; likewise, there can be numerous short responses to a single question or statement.

Here are examples:

- Various statements/same response

John is a wonderful tennis player, Really?	I simply can't afford a vacation now. Really?
Does Tim have a new job? I have no idea.	Is Mark remarried? I have no idea.

- Same statement/various responses

Is your sister back from college? Unfortunately, not.	Is your sister back from college? Of course.
Mr. Garcia won the lottery! Ter- rific!	Mr. Garcia won the lottery! You're kidding!

Exercise 3.7.1 Respond to the following questions and statements with one of the words or phrases listed in the preceding section.

Example:

Thanks for helping out with the party. You're welcome.

1. Do you have to work this Saturday?
2. I really appreciate your support. Thanks.
3. The dog knocked over Mom's new vase.
4. Is winter going to last much longer?
5. Will the new girl be joining us for dinner?
6. My cousin lost his job and can't afford his apartment.
7. Our school's soccer team won first place
8. Are you interested in working abroad?
9. It seems that the other candidate will win the election.

10. Did the operation go well?

Exercise 3.7.2 Write an appropriate question or statement for each of the responses provided.

Example:

3.7.1 Interjections

Interjections are words that are used to express strong emotion. They can appear alone or as part of a sentence. They give a text a casual tone and, therefore, are rarely used in formal writing. Here is a roster of some common interjections:

ah	great	now	there
aha	here	O	well
alas	hurrah	oh	what
bravo	indeed	ouch	why
good	my	see	wow
goodness	no	so	yes

Besides showing emotion as an exclamation, an interjection can also function as a parenthetical word. Its position is most often at the beginning of a sentence or clause, but interjections can sometimes occur elsewhere in a sentence.

Interjections

If an interjection is written by itself, it is most often punctuated with an exclamation point. The examples that follow illustrate how sentences change when an interjection is added to them:

Stand near the piano.	a casual command
No! Stand near the piano.	an abrupt correction to someone standing in the wrong place
That wound looks serious.	a casual statement
Ouch! That wound looks serious.	an expression of sympathy for the injured person
The cold water tastes good.	a casual statement
Ah, the cold water tastes good.	an expression of satisfaction that the person's thirst is being quenched

Most of the interjections listed in this section are self-explanatory. However, some require a little clarification.

We'll start with the difference between ah and aha and proceed alphabetically. The use of ah shows delight or comfort, while the use of aha announces that a truth has been discovered or a secret revealed.

1. Ah! You spelled that word just right.
2. Ah, that feels good.
3. Aha! You're the thief!
4. Aha! I see you've hidden the map behind this portrait.

Although the word alas sounds somewhat archaic, it is still used in many forms of writing to provide a lofty tone and to express regret or disappointment. It is usually interchangeable with unfortunately.

1. Alas, despite hours of negotiations, the treaty was not signed.
2. Their efforts to secure a peace were, alas, a failure.

The normal meaning and use of goodness (decency, honesty, kindness) is lost when that word is used as an interjection. It gives the idea that the speaker or writer is somewhat shocked:

1. Goodness, that was a close call.
2. Goodness! Why are you dressed like that?

The possessive my can be used as an interjection, but when it is, it no longer has to do with possession. Rather, it expresses the idea of mild shock or mild delight. For example:

1. My, that was a harsh thing to say to him.
2. My, I really like the way you look in that dress.

The adverb now does not describe time when it functions as an interjection. Instead, it means that a suggestion is about to be stated.

1. Now, start again and play that melody with greater emotion.

2. Now, let's not argue about that again.

vocative

There is a difference between O and oh. The use of O is vocative; it addresses a person or persons and suggests passion or is used in prayer. The interjection oh is used to express sudden emotion or surprise. Many writers use it in place of O

1. O Lord! Hear my prayer!
2. O, all men of goodwill, join me in this crusade.
3. Oh, I love the evening view over the Grand Canyon.
4. Oh, I didn't see you standing there

The verb see has nothing to do with vision when it serves as an interjection. It implies that someone needs to be aware of a situation or that someone has failed to heed a warning.

1. See, this is how you hem a skirt properly.
2. See! I told you that you'd ruin that old clock if you wound it too tightly.

When there is used as an interjection, its meaning does not indicate a place. Instead, it points out how something is done or suggests that an unwanted situation has developed.

1. There, that's the way to slice a turkey breast.
2. There! You had to go on that hike, and now you have a bad cold!

The word what is used with two different kinds of interjections. One is a question that carries the interrogative meaning of what but with strong emotion. The other does not ask a question but instead exclaims marked disbelief. For example:

1. What? Tell me that again! I can't believe my ears!
2. What! It's a lie! The man is a liar!

The interrogative why is no interrogative at all when it is used as an interjection. It says, instead, that something is unbelievable or a contradiction.

1. Why, there's no such thing as an elf!
2. Why, you can't really believe that story.

In the space provided, enter an appropriate interjection for the intent of each sentence.

Exercise 3.7.3 In the space provided, enter an appropriate interjection for the intent of each sentence.

Example:

My, having dinner out tonight is a dandy idea.

1. look what you've done now!
2. I love the way you give a back massage.

3. you've found your keys. Now we can finally leave.
4. That was an outstanding performance!
5. That must have caused you a lot of pain.
6. Our team has won the championship again!
7. ! You lied to me, and now you're in a lot of trouble.
8. you want to be a movie star.
9. it's getting late. I had better go home
10. Your secret has finally been exposed
11. ! Don't touch that wire! You'll get a shock!

Exercise 3.7.4 Write an original sentence with each of the interjections provided.

1. now
2. an
3. great
4. see
5. there
6. well
7. why
8. here
9. so
10. indeed

3.8 Antonyms and contrasts

Antonyms and contrasts play a significant role in understanding language and enhancing communication skills. Here's a detailed overview of their importance, definitions, and applications.

- Definitions

- Antonyms: These are words that have opposite meanings. For example, "hot" and "cold," "happy" and "sad," or "big" and "small." Antonyms help clarify meaning by providing a contrasting perspective on a concept.
- Contrasts: This term refers to the act of comparing two or more things to highlight their differences. In language, contrasts can be expressed through antonyms, but they can also involve comparing different ideas, themes, or characteristics.

- Importance of Antonyms and Contrasts

- Enhancing Vocabulary: Understanding antonyms enriches vocabulary by allowing learners to see the full spectrum of meanings associated with words. This knowledge enables more precise expression in both spoken and written communication.
- Improving Comprehension Skills: Antonyms play a crucial role in reading comprehension. They help readers understand the context and nuances of texts by providing a clearer picture of what is being described. For instance, knowing that "happy" is the opposite of "sad" can help readers grasp emotional contexts in literature more effectively.
- Facilitating Critical Thinking: Recognizing contrasts encourages critical thinking. It prompts individuals to analyze and evaluate different perspectives, enhancing their ability to engage in discussions and debates.
- Nuanced Communication: Using antonyms and contrasts allows for more nuanced communication. It helps speakers and writers convey subtle differences in meaning, which can be essential for effective storytelling or argumentation.
- Teaching and Learning Tools: In educational settings, antonyms and contrasts are often used to teach vocabulary and comprehension skills. They provide a framework for learners to explore language relationships, making lessons more engaging and informative.

Antonyms and contrasts

People often study antonyms as a way of developing vocabulary, but being knowledgeable about antonyms is also an aid in learning to write better sentences. Using pairs of opposites, as well as other words that are not true antonyms but still show a real contrast, can be helpful in developing good sentences.

It is wrong to think that antonyms just describe opposite meanings, such as in the following examples:

Strong contrasts

Illustrating a difference by using contrasting words can help to make a strong point. For instance, instead of just describing someone or something with a single adjective, it is possible to emphasize a quality by employing contrasts. Here is an example:

The villain in the story cannot be described as a good man, for his lying, cheating, and attempts at deception proved him to be the worst among the bad.

You likely are familiar with a variety of antonyms and contrasts. Many are basic to the study of language. Some commonly used pairs of contrasting words are listed here:

all/none	day/night	right/wrong always/never	dirty/clean	send/receive beautiful/ugly	early/late	smart/stupid
before/after	easy/difficult	start/finish
below/above	empty/full	wet/dry
black/white	find/lose	young/old dark/light	often/seldom	find/lose easy/difficult	empty/full	often/seldom right/wrong	send/receive	smart/stupid
start/finish	wet/dry	young/old

Exercise 3.8.1 Using the following pairs of words, write sentences that make a simple contrast.

Example:

long/short He needed a long rope but found only a short one.

1. easy/difficult
2. empty/full
3. find/lose
4. often/seldom
5. right/wrong
6. send/receive
7. smart/stupid
8. start/finish
9. wet/dry
10. young/old

There are numerous pairs of contrasting words, and most of them can be employed to make a special point in a sentence—a contrast for emphasis. Although the meanings of the individual words may be simple, the effect can be impressive when they're used in this way. For instance, if

Exercise 3.8.2 Using each pair of words provided, write a sentence that makes an emphatic point as illustrated in the preceding examples.

1. all/none

2. always/never
3. beautiful/ugly
4. before/after
5. below/above
6. black/white
7. dark/light
8. day/night
9. dirty/dean
10. early/late

There are numerous pairs of contrasting words, and most of them can be employed to make a special point in a sentence—a contrast for emphasis. Although the meanings of the individual words may be simple, the effect can be impressive when they're used in this way. For instance, if sentences that go beyond a simple contrast. Here are two examples:

1. Their neighbor was not known for giving, not of himself nor of his earthly goods; he was infamous, however, for his taking: taking what didn't belong to him, taking away person's valuable time, and taking the joy out of life.
2. I gave her all my love, and she took it gladly along with my self-respect and every penny I had saved.

Some antonyms describe a more complex or abstract contrast and are therefore somewhat more difficult to use. Words such as absent/present require that you do a bit more thinking when using them in a sentence.

1. The old woman's physical body was present at the dinner table, but her thoughts and her soul were absent and searching a thousand miles away for the life she had led as a girl.

The following list contains pairs of words that have a more complex or abstract relationship:

abundant/scarcely	cruel/kind	imaginary/real accept/refuse	deep/shallow	increase/decrease bitter/sweet	discourage/encourage	outer/inner cheerful/sad	double/single	reward/punishment
combine/separate	drunk/sober	strengthen/weaken
comedy/tragedy	graceful/clumsy	victory/defeat
crooked/straight	guilty/innocent

These pairs of words can be used to make a simple contrast, but because they are more complex or abstract than a pair such as big/little, the effect in a sentence can be a loftier tone. Compare the following sentences:

1. He wanted to be big, but he was only a little man.
2. He wanted to be deep, but he was only a shallow man.

Exercise 3.8.3 Complete each sentence that follows with a phrase that contains the appropriate antonym or contrasting word for the one provided in the first part of the sentence.

Example:

The pond was shallow near the dock, but in the middle it was dangerously deep.

1. There is no comedy in what you say -
2. A crooked path meandered through the woods -
3. His letter seemed so crue
4. I can neither discourage you from this venture
5. She saw a double figure of a man
6. The revelers were drunk with joy
7. For a large man he moved gracefully
8. She pronounced her husband guilty
9. Some say that ghosts are imaginary
10. The victory over the enemy was costly

Certain other pairs of contrasting words are even more abstract. Their use generally requires employing more complex sentences. Let's look at some examples:

1. The fall harvest was usually abundant, but this year the wheat crop was scarce.
2. He claimed their meeting was accidental, but she knew he had shown up intentionally.
3. The regiment struggled to advance, but there was only retreat in their fate. I come not to condemn this man but to praise him.
4. The nation had been conquered, but the spirit of the people knew no surrender.
5. Their failed business was no disgrace, but there was likewise no honor in it.
6. Before the drought the fields were fertile with crops; now they lay barren under the sun.
7. Where once the people knew harmony there now was only discord.
8. In the South they know no harsh winters and enjoy a mild climate year-round.
9. I thought my heart was unbreakable, but I learned the hard way that it was as fragile as crystal

Exercise 3.8.4 Complete each sentence that follows with a phrase that contains the appropriate antonym or contrasting word for the one provided in the second part of the sentence.

1. _____ and they could only hope for an abundant crop next year.
2. _____ his use of the word liar was intentional.
3. _____ if you retreat in every debate with the boss?

4. but I also have no praise for her.
5. but it cannot be conquered.
6. the former hero died in disgrace.
7. yet she had become barren in her later years.
8. they only wished to live in harmony with their neighbors.
9. but his angry words were harsh.
10. it is as unbreakable as my will.

3.8.1 Prefixes and suffixes

Prefixes and suffixes

Some pairs of contrasting words are formed from the use of two common suffixes: –ful and –less.

- The suffix –ful indicates an abundance of the quality of the adjective to which it is attached. For example:
hateful having an abundance of hate, or full of hate
- The suffix –less suggests a lack of the quality of the adjective to which it is attached. For example:
Childless— having no children, or barren

Not all adjectives can be combined with both suffixes. Review the following list of adjectives, some of which use both suffixes and some of which use only one:

-FUL	-LESS
bashful
careful	Careless
cheerful	cheerless guiltless grateful
helpful	helpless
hopeful	hopeless lifeless
mindful	mindless
restful	restless senseless
	shapeless
sinful	sinless speechless
spiteful
thankful	thankless
useful	useless wonderful timeless
	winless

Pairing these words can make for interesting sentences. Let's look at a few examples:

1. John was neither sinful nor sinless but just an ordinary man.
2. She was always mindful of his physical needs yet mindless of his emotions.
3. I'm thankful that you helped me with this thankless task.

As noted, some words combine with only one of these two suffixes. Nevertheless, those that combine with both can still be used singly without the need of showing a contrast.

- Adjectives with one suffix
 - Her lifeless body lay on the bed where she had died.
 - Old Mr. Cane was a spiteful and bitter man.
 - How wonderful to be back in my homeland.
- Adjectives that can take both suffixes
 - The boys have been helpful today.
 - The elderly man was in a helpless state and unable to speak.
 - This old machinery is hardly useful in a big project like this.
 - It's useless for you to try to explain such bad behavior.

Exercise 3.8.5 Complete each sentence that follows with a phrase that contains the appropriate antonym or contrasting word.

1. Although he was usually careful when handling these chemicals,
2. but his mood was cheerless.

3. I was still hopeful
4. Although I found the room restful
5. The tearful woman was truly thankful,
6. You have to be mindful of the fact that
7. Martin tried to be helpful.
8. her attempt to help was useless.
9. Tom made a cheerful noise

Exercise 3.8.6 Write original sentences with the adjectives provided.

1. bashful
2. guiltless
3. grateful
4. lifeless
5. senseless
6. shapeless
7. speechless
8. spiteful
9. timeless
10. homeless

The prefixes un- and mis- can be used to change many adjectives and nouns to a negative or contrasting construction. The prefix un- is synonymous with not, while the prefix mis- says that the action of a verb is performed incorrectly. In some cases, the two prefixes can be used with the same word, but with a different meaning being derived.

NO PREFIX	THE PREFIX UNable	unable	not able, or incapable broken	unbroken	not broken after a mishap
just	unjust	not just or fair likely	unlikely	not likely, rare shaken	unshaken	not shaken, still calm
NO PREFIX	THE PREFIX MIS.
calculate	miscalculate	calculate or analyze incorrectly
handle	mishandle	handle poorly, or bungle
represent	misrepresent	represent something as something else
speak	misspeak	make a spoken error
treat	mistreat	treat badly or cruelly

Numerous words sport these prefixes. You can employ them to give your sentences a more formal tone. Consider the following two sentences; they say about the same thing, but the second example sounds more formal:

1. John figured it out wrong
2. John miscalculated.

There are also many words that use both un- and mis- as prefixes. The meanings of such words must be differentiated. Let's look at some examples:

misinformed	informed incorrectly
uninformed	not informed
misarranged	arranged incorrectly
unarranged	not arranged
misnamed	named incorrectly
unnamed	not named

3.8.2 Other forms of the prefix un-

The form of the prefix un- can change slightly, depending on the vowel or consonant that follows it, although the meaning of not still pertains. For example, un- becomes in- with some words:

inaccurate	inefficient
inadequate	inexpensive
indivisible	infrequent

Likewise, the prefix changes to im- sometimes. This frequently occurs when the prefix is attached to a word that begins with the letter m. For example:

immature	immodest
immeasurable	immoral
immobile	immortal

Note also that the prefix ig- replaces un- with the adjective ignoble, which means not noble, or lowborn. The same prefix is encountered with a few other words, for which there is no contrasting form in English. Examples include the related words ignore, ignorant, and ignoramus.

The prefix dis-

The passive voice and the subjunctive mood

Another prefix that imparts a contrasting or negative meaning to some words is dis-. Here are some examples:

appear	disappear	no longer appearing, vanish
comfort	discomfort	being uncomfortable
content	discontent	lack of contentment, uneasiness
honest	dishonest	not honest

Just as with other prefixes, this one cannot be attached to a word at random. Over time, only certain words have combined with dis- to yield a contrasting or negative meaning. Also as with other prefixes, dis- can combine with most kinds of words: nouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs. Let's look at some sample sentences that illustrate the use of this prefix:

1. I'm surprised at just how discourteous the salesman was.
2. His disgraceful behavior has landed him in a lot of hot water.
3. Their youngest daughter has become rather disobedient.

The surgical instruments need to be disinfected.

Exercise 3.8.7 Write original sentences containing each of the words provided. Begin each sentence with a clause that starts with although.

Example:

mistaken Although Larry was usually right, this time he was mistaken.

1. ignoble
2. unnatural
3. misunderstand
4. unsolved
5. misbehave

Write original sentences using each of the words and phrases provided.

- 6 discouraged from
- 7 dissatisfy
- 8 severe disability
- 9 displeasing manner
- 10 discontinue

Chapter 4

Improved writing

4.1 The passive voice and the subjunctive mood

The passive voice is so named because it places the subject of an active-voice sentence—the “doer” of the action—in a passive position in the passive-voice sentence. In some cases, it is even possible to omit the doer of the action completely. English has two forms of passive: one contains a past participle used as a verb, and the other contains a past participle used as an adjective.

4.1.1 The passive voice and past participles

The English active voice consists of a subject, a transitive verb, and a direct or indirect object. If those elements occur, the sentence can be changed to a passive-voice sentence. Sentences that contain intransitive verbs cannot be made passive.

subject + transitive verb + object

John + bought + a new car.

Let's look first at some examples of active-voice sentences:

- Sentences with a transitive verb
 - Jill recommended the movie
 - They have never met Mr. Carlson.
 - Did you already repair the garage door?
- Sentences with an intransitive verb
 - We went swimming in Lake Michigan
 - My cousin was in Iraq for ten months.
 - The girls came home around ten P.M.

A passive-voice sentence consists of a subject, a form of to be, a past participle, and an optional prepositional phrase introduced by the preposition by. When an active sentence is changed to passive, the direct or indirect object of the active sentence becomes the subject of the passive sentence. The verb in the active sentence determines the tense of to be in the passive sentence and is formed as a past participle. The active subject is changed to the object of the preposition by in the passive sentence.

subject + to be + past participle

The book + had been + stolen.

Let's now look at an active sentence and how it is changed to the passive voice:

1. Active Michael chased the little girl across the playground.
2. Passive The little girl was chased across the playground by Michael.

In the active-voice example, the verb is in the past tense—chased. Therefore, in the passive sentence, the verb to be is conjugated in the past tense—was. If the active verb had been chases, the verb would have been used. If the active verb had been will chase, the verb will be would have been used.

Now let's look at active sentences in other tenses and how they are changed to the passive voice:

Active	Someone is breaking the window,	present progressive
Passive	The window is being broken.	by someone
Active	They have built a moat around the castle.	present perfect
Passive	A moat has been built around the castle.	by them
Active	The angry father will punish the naughty boy.	future
Passive	The naughty boy will be punished.	by the angry father

Exercise 4.1.1 Using each set of words provided, first write an active sentence in the tense specified in parentheses. Then rewrite the sentence in the passive voice.

1. (past) she / learn / several / new / songs

(a)

(b)

2. (present progressive) bartender / pour / two / beer

(a)

(b)

3. (present perfect) Andrea / borrow / new / SUV

(a)

(b)

4. (future) we / never / catch / huge / fish

(a)

(b)

5. (past progressive) Jack / carefully / photograph / scene / of / accident

(a)

(b)

6. (present) I / usually / lead / band

(a)

(b)

7. (past perfect) farmer / plow / field / by late afternoon

(a)

(b)

4.1.2 Why use the passive voice?

The passive voice comes in handy when the writer wishes to emphasize the object of an active sentence: the object becomes the subject of the passive sentence.

The boy almost hurt the little puppy.	direct object
The little puppy was almost hurt by the boy,	subject
He ripped her dress.	direct object
Her dress was ripped by him.	subject

It is also used when the writer wishes to omit the doer of the action. This choice can reflect the writer's intention to be evasive or to be tactful by not identifying the doer. For example:

1. The mayor will fire the entire office staff
2. The entire office staff will be fired.

The writer chooses not to identify the mayor as the responsible party.

1. An angry mob beat the poor man bloody.
2. The poor man was beaten bloody.
3. The writer does not name the guilty party.

Another use of the passive voice is for sentences in which no specific doer of the action is involved. This often occurs when the subject of the active sentence is vague: they, people, some people, many, and one, among others.

1. They grow blueberries in Michigan.
2. Blueberries are grown in Michigan.
3. People accused Mr. Thomas of being dishonest.
4. Mr. Thomas was accused of being dishonest.

Exercise 4.1.2 Rewrite the following active-voice sentences in the passive voice. Do not include a by phrase in your passive sentences.

1. They grow oranges and lemons in this region of California.
2. Some people have already identified the thief.
3. He is painting her portrait as a surprise for her husband.
4. People will greet him enthusiastically.
5. They repaired and repainted the old car.
6. Despite the inconsistencies, many believed his story.
7. Some have recommended Ms. Lopez for the job.
8. They were examining the evidence in preparation for the trial.
9. Someone has noted his strange behavior in the final report.
10. Did anyone recognize him?

If a writer wishes to conceal his or her source of information, the impersonal it can be used as the subject of a passive phrase that serves to introduce another clause. For example:

1. It has been reported that the country is in a recession.
2. It is widely believed that humans evolved from apes.

Exercise 4.1.3 *Using the verbs provided, write original passive sentences with the impersonal it as the subject. Provide an appropriate accompanying clause for each*

Example:

believe It is believed that nearly a hundred people were injured in the accident.

1. report
2. state
3. remark
4. say
5. write
6. announce
7. estimate
8. decide
9. mention
10. argue

4.1.3 Direct and indirect objects

If the active sentence contains both a direct object and an indirect object, the passive formations of that sentence differ and depend on which object is made the subject of the passive sentence. For example:

1. James gave the poor man five dollars.
2. The poor man was given five dollars by James.
3. the poor man = indirect object five dollars = direct object indirect object as subject Five dollars was given to the poor man by James. direct object as subject If the direct object is the subject of the passive sentence, the indirect object requires the use of the preposition to Five dollars was given to the poor man by James.

Exercise 4.1.4 Rewrite the following active sentences in the passive voice twice: first with the direct object used as the passive subject, and then with the indirect object used as the passive subject.

1. The woman sent him a counterfeit check.

(a)

(b)

2. I will lend the man a shirt and tie

(a)

(b)

3. Aunt Mary is shipping us a crate of oranges

(a)

(b)

4. Were the judges awarding them a medal?

(a)

(b)

5. The broker has shown the young couple two new houses

(a)

(b)

4.1.4 Auxiliaries and the passive

As the passive voice is expressed in the various tenses, the verb to be has to be conjugated appropriately. In the perfect tenses, the auxiliary have is the conjugated verb, and to be is formed as the past participle been.

has/have/had + been + past participle

I have + been + robbed

Let's look at the passive voice in the various tenses:

Present	She is kissed by Ben. / She is being kissed by Ben.
Past	She was kissed by Ben. / She was being kissed by Ben.
Present perfect	She has been kissed by Ben.
Past perfect	She had been kissed by Ben.
Future	She will be kissed by Ben.

Other auxiliaries often accompany the passive voice as well. When this is the case, it is the auxiliary that is conjugated in a specific tense, and the passive-voice structure is a passive infinitive. The passive infinitive is always to be plus a past participle.

auxiliary + to be + past participle

It must + be + repaired today.

auxiliaries

Some commonly used auxiliaries are can, have to, must, want to, ought to, should, and be able to. Let's look at a few sample sentences with some of these auxiliaries in various tenses:

Your suit can be cleaned and pressed by four p.m. present tense

The meeting will have to be postponed. future tens

Didn't you want to be chosen for the job?

Jake will be added to the team by Coach Brown.

past tense, future auxiliary

Not all auxiliaries can be used in all the tenses. Can, must, ought to, and should, for example, occur only in the present and past tenses. Their past-tense forms are, respectively, could, must have, ought to have, and should have. The auxiliaries have to, be able to, and want to occur in all the tenses. Let's look at one of these auxiliaries—want to—in the various tenses:

Present	Laura wants to be taken more seriously.
Past	Laura wanted to be taken more seriously.
Present perfect	Laura has wanted to be taken more seriously.
Past perfect	Laura had wanted to be taken more seriously.
Future	Laura will want to be taken more seriously.

It is only the auxiliary that changes in the various tenses. The passive-voice form remains a passive infinitive (to be taken) throughout.

When must have, ought to have, and should have are followed by the passive voice, the passive structure consists of been plus a past participle.

1. She must have been warned about his temper.
2. We ought to have been paid a little more money.
3. You should have been rewarded for such a good deed.

Exercise 4.1.5 Rewrite the following passive sentences using the auxiliaries provided in parentheses; retain the tense of the original sentence.

Example:

(can) She was seen by a group of people

She could be seen by a group of people.

1. (must) Robert is rushed to the hospital.
2. (have to) Someone is held responsible for any act of vandalism.
3. (should) I was not found guilty.
4. (want to) These men will be paid fairly.

4.1.5 The stative passive

As mentioned earlier, there is a second type of passive. It consists of a conjugation of the verb to be plus a past participle. That, of course, sounds like the previous description of the passive voice. The difference is not so much in the structure as it is in the meaning and usage of the past participle. This second passive, called the stative passive, uses the past participle as an adjective. Consider the following two sentences in the present tense:

1. The old clock is being repaired.
2. The old clock is repaired.

The first sentence conveys an action that is in progress, and the participle repaired is in the passive voice. The second sentence describes the clock as already being in a state of repair. It is adjectival in nature and, therefore, in the stative passive voice. When the progressive form of the verb is used (is being repaired), the past participle describes the action of a verb; the structure is, therefore, not the stative passive. A prepositional phrase introduced by the preposition by is another indicator that the past participle is not adjectival.

The dish is broken.	stative passive
The dish is broken by Jack.	action in the passive voice
The bread is sliced.	stative passive
The bread is sliced by a special machine.	action in the passive voice

The stative passive tends to occur in the present tense. However, if the intent of the writer is to apply the past participle as an adjective, other tenses can be used. In such constructions, the adjectival meaning may not always be clear. Consider the following past participles used in the stative passive:

Present	This cup is broken.	Its condition is "broken." It requires repair.
Past	This cup was broken.	It used to be broken. It has been glued together.
Present perfect	This cup has been broken for more than a month.	It's been in a broken condition for more than a month.
Past perfect	This cup had been broken but is now whole again.	It used to be broken. It has been glued together.
Future	This cup will be broken.	The prediction is that its condition in the future will be "broken."

If you replace the word broken with a true adjective, such as yellow, the adjectival function of the past participle becomes clear. If yellow can replace a past participle and make sense, then the past participle is being used as an adjective. If it makes no sense, the past participle is a verb in the passive voice. Compare the following sentences: This cup is broken. This cup is yellow. Makes no sense.

This cup was broken.	This cup is yellow by Tom.
The clock was repaired.	The clock was yellow.	Makes no sense.
The clock was repaired by her.	The clock was yellow by her.
She is being yellow.	She is being yellow by Mom.
She is being punished.	She is being punished by Mom.	Makes no sense.

When the verb to be is conjugated in the progressive present tense or progressive past tense, it is clear that the past participle is part of the passive-voice structure. When the progressive conjugation is not used, though, that clarity of meaning is lost, and the sentence could be interpreted as either the passive voice or the stative passive. The addition of a by phrase makes the passive voice meaning clear. Passive voice/progressive tense Passive voice or stative passive

The dog is being washed.	The dog is washed.
The field was cleared.	The field was being cleared.

Passive voice/progressive tense + by Passive voice + by

The dog is being washed by John.	The dog is washed by John.
The field was being cleared by the men.	The field was cleared by the men.

Whether a past participle is being used as part of a passive-voice structure or as an adjective is wholly dependent on the writer's intent, and the reader cannot always guess correctly what the writer has intended. Therefore, when writing, it is preferable to use the active voice so as to be absolutely clear about what is meant.

1. John is washing the dog.
2. John washes the dog.
3. The men were clearing the field.
4. The men cleared the field.

Exercise 4.1.6 Using each of the following verbs provided, write two original sentences: one that uses the verb in the passive voice, and then one that uses the verb in the stative passive.

The car is being repaired in the city.

The washing machine is repaired and ready for use.

1. ruin

(b)

2. destroy

(a)

3. paint

4. misspell

5. heal

4.1.6 The subjunctive mood

The English subjunctive mood has three forms. One is the infinitive of a verb with the omission of the particle word to: (to) go, (to) be, and so on. The second form is the past tense of a verb. In the case of the verb to be, only the plural past tense (were) is used in the subjunctive. The third form uses the auxiliary would followed by an infinitive or by have and a past participle. Let's look at these three forms:

INFINITIVE	FORM 1	FORM 2	FORM 3
to be	be	were	would be/would have been to come	come	came	would come/would have come to go	go	went	would go/would have gone
to speak	speak	spoke	would speak/would have spoken

The infinitive form of the subjunctive is used in sentences that convey a suggestion, a request, a recommendation, or a proposal. Note that the conjunction that is optional in such sentences. For example:

I suggest she find another way to get to work. not she finds
 Would you recommend that they be allowed to stay here? not they are

The past-tense form of the subjunctive is used to express a wish or a condition and is often combined with a subjunctive clause that includes either would plus an infinitive or would have plus a past participle:

- A wish
 - If only Jack were here with us now.
 - If you could just try to understand my perspective.
 - If only he had tried a little harder.
- A condition
 - If the rain let up, we would go out for a long walk.
 - My son would have been here if he had known that you needed help.
 - If you were my son, I would give you the same advice.

Notice that a "wish" statement often includes the word only. In a conditional statement, the if clause sets the condition, and the accompanying clause is the "result" if the condition is met.

- condition result
 - If she were well, she would pay us a visit.

Exercise 4.1.7 Complete each of the following sentences with any appropriate phrase

1. I suggest
2. No one recommended she
3. The lawyer requested it
4. The mayor proposed that
5. Would you suggest that the law

Exercise 4.1.8 Using the following verbs provided, write sentences that express a wish.

1. to find
2. to be -
3. to be able to
4. to be seen
5. to have driven Using the following pairs of verbs provided, write sentences that express a condition and a result, include a clause that begins with if.

Example:

to sing / to listen

If she sang in tune, I would listen to her song.

6. to bring / to eat
7. permit / to love to chat
8. have insisted / have not left
9. to have to / to understand
10. to be/to be

4.2 Phrasal verbs

Phrasal verbs are verbs that are combined with other words-prepositions and adverbs-to form a new meaning, often a meaning that is radically different from the meaning of the verb alone. Because there are hundreds of such constructions, this chapter illustrates only a sampling of high-frequency verbs that form commonly used phrasal verbs. common verb + adverb and/or preposition to hold + up (to rob)

adverb and a preposition or a combination

When an adverb, a preposition, or a combination of both is attached to a verb, the conjugation of the verb is not altered. It is the meaning and, therefore, the use of the verb that is changed. Let's look at the common verb to come to see how its meaning changes in a few phrasal verb forms:

to come to	to regain consciousness
to come up to	to approach
to come up with	to create, or to discover

Compare the use of these three phrasal verbs with a standard verb in the following examples:

- When Jane came to, she didn't know where she was.
- When Jane regained consciousness, she didn't know where she was.
- I came up to the weary horse and patted its nose.
- I approached the weary horse and patted its nose.
- How did you come up with so much money?
- How did you find so much money?

In order to deal with phrasal verbs effectively, a student of English should have a dictionary that specializes in phrasal verbs. This is an important tool for identifying phrasal verbs and for understanding their meanings and uses.

- Be

Many phrasal verbs are formed from the verb to be. Let's look at three of them: to be in or out, to be with it, and to be up to something. The phrasal verb to be in, as noted in Chapter 8, conveys that a person is at home or in the office, while to be out means a person is away from home or away from the office. In addition, to be out can indicate that someone is "out" having fun. For example:

The phrasal verb to be in, as noted in Chapter 8, conveys that a person is at home or in the office, while to be out means a person is away from home or away from the office. In addition, to be out can indicate that someone is "out" having fun. For example:

1. Little Michael is in for the day and taking a nap.
2. What time will Dr. Schultz be in?
3. Why were you out so late last night?
4. My dentist is out for the day.

The second phrasal verb under this heading, to be with it, suggests fashion ability or awareness of the latest trends. Used in the negative, it can mean that someone is not up to date or not in touch with pop culture.

1. Andrea has another new dress. She's always so with it.
2. Poor Bill still can't dance. He's just not with it.

To be up to something (sometimes to be up to no good) conveys that someone looks suspicious and has some kind of evil intentions.

1. What's that man doing? I think he's up to something.
2. I knew you were up to something when I saw you holding a shovel.
3. Her children are always up to no good.

With this phrasal verb, it is usual to follow the word something with an appropriate adjective; for example: I think he's up to something illegal. When adding an adjective in this manner, it is also possible to change something to anything when the sentence is negated: I don't think they're up to anything wrong.

Break

Among the phrasal verbs that can be formed with the verb to break are to break down and to break up. The use of the words up and down may suggest that these are opposites, but that is not the case. The phrasal verb to break down has two meanings: (1) to stop working (such as in reference to a mechanical device); and (2) to give in to one's emotions or someone's demands. For example:

1. How often does this computer break down?
2. The day had been awful, and she broke down and cried.
3. We questioned the thief for hours, and he finally broke down and confessed.

The phrasal verb to break up carries the sense of causing someone to laugh aloud. It suggests that the actions or words in question were so funny that the person could not control his or her amusement.

1. Maria's joke broke everyone up.
2. The clown's silly antics always broke the audience up.

The same construction has a radically different meaning and use when followed by the preposition with. It means that one person is ending a romantic relationship with another person: to break up with someone.

1. After five months of dating, she knew she had to break up with Tom.
2. He no longer loved her. It was time to break up

Breeze

The phrase to breeze through refers to the ability to carry out a task with ease or dispatch. Don breezed through his workday and set off for his date with Tina. No one ever breezes through Professor Chang's exams.

Count

Do not confuse the usage to count (on)-that is, in the sense of to calculate by using one's fingers-with the phrasal verb to count on, which means to rely on. The preposition upon sometimes replaces on in the phrasal meaning.

1. The little boy counted on his fingers.
2. I know I can count on you for your support.
3. You shouldn't have counted on Jim to give you any help in moving.

Exercise 4.2.1 Using each phrasal verb provided, write two original sentences.

Example:

to be in

Mr. Cane won't be in until after two P.M.

I have to stay in this evening and do some studying.

1. to be out

(a)

(b)

2. to be with it

(a)

(b)

3. to be up to something/no good

(a)

(b)

4. to break down

(a)

(b)

5. to break up (with

(a)

(b)

6. to breeze through

(a)

(b)

7. to cut on

(a)

(b)

Cut

The verb cut can be combined with the preposition out: to cut (something) out. Meanings of this phrasal verb include (1) to stop doing something; (2) to eliminate or cast out someone or something; and (3) to clip out or excise a shape from something. Here are some examples:

1. Cut that out! You're being too noisy!
2. Why cut me out? I spent as much time on the project as anyone.
3. Maria cut out a cartoon from the newspaper.
4. I'll cut a recipe out of the magazine.

This kind of phrasal verb is special in that the object of the verb can either precede or follow the preposition out if that object is a noun. Pronouns can only precede the preposition. Don't forget that prepositions in phrasal verbs can serve as adverbs

- noun direct object + preposition
- I cut an interesting article + out for you.
- I cut out + an interesting article for you.
- preposition + noun direct object
- pronoun direct object + preposition
- I cut it + out for you.

This flexibility occurs with many phrasal verbs-but not with all. This characteristic is identified in reference to other phrasal verbs in the remainder of this chapter as the "flexible position" of a preposition. Be aware that many of these prepositions are not functioning as prepositions in these sentences; they are functioning as adverbs. In the phrasal verb to call (someone) unmeaning either to phone someone or to conscript someone for military service-up is used as an adverb. Consider the following sentence: They called up my brother to serve two years in the army

In this sentence, the words up my brother do not constitute a prepositional phrase. Instead, up modifies the verb call, and my brother is a direct object.

Drop

When to drop is combined with in, the new phrasal verb means to stop at someone's home for a short visit. To specify what person is being visited, the preposition on is added. Here are some examples:

1. My parents dropped in last night around eight.
2. When you're in town, please drop in on us.
3. I never drop in on Michael unexpectedly.

• End

When up is added to the verb to end, the phrase takes on either of two distinct meanings: (1) to reach completion or termination; or (2) when the preposition with is added, to find oneself in the company of someone or in possession of something-usually a result that is unwanted or unpleasant. Let's look at some examples:

1. These meetings won't end up until tomorrow after two p.m.
2. Professor Hill ended the lecture up with a few words of advice.
3. After her date with Jim, Maria ended up with a bad cold.
4. I wanted to dance with Martin! How did I end up with Michael?
Sometimes to end up with is stated as to wind up with. They mean the same thing
5. He ended up with no money at all. He wound up with no money at all.
The preposition in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object
6. She ended up the discussion with a little joke.
7. She ended the discussion up with a little joke.
8. She ended it up with a little joke.

• Follow

When to follow is combined with up, and sometimes on, the phrasal verb means to examine something that has been done, or to evaluate how someone has performed. Some examples:

1. I'll follow up on Maria's progress with a report.
2. The detective decided to follow up the new clue.
3. The reporter was following up on the strange story.

When the preposition up is used without on in this phrasal verb, up has a flexible position around the object:

1. We should follow that report up.
2. We should follow up that report.
3. We should follow it up.

• Fool

The verb to fool is synonymous with to deceive. However, when around is attached to the verb, new meanings emerge: (1) it means to hang about idly; (2) when the preposition with is added, it means to do something wasteful or useless; and (3) when used with the preposition on instead, it means to be unfaithful. Here are some examples:

1. There was nothing else to do, so we just fooled around in the park.
2. Why are you fooling around with that old radio.
3. If you're fooling around on me, I want you to tell me now.

• Get

Several phrasal verbs are formed with the verb to get. Two that are worth discussion are to get away (with) and to get at. When to get away is used alone, it means to escape, or to move away from a location. The addition of the preposition with changes the meaning: the new phrase means to carry out an evil act without punishment. Look at these examples:

1. The prisoner dug a tunnel from his cell and tried to get away. Get away from the window. It's drafty there.
2. He thought he got away with his crime, but he was arrested last week.

Get at has three meanings: (1) to put one's hands on or attack someone; (2) to hint at some thing: and (3) to begin discussing something. Some examples:

1. The bully was trying to get at me, but my friends held him back
2. I don't understand. What are you getting at
3. It's time we finally get at the heart of the matter and solve this problem.

Exercise 4.2.2 Complete each sentence that follows with any appropriate phrase or clause that incorporates a phrasal verb.

1. Jonathan knew he could count
2. Our new neighbors like to drop
3. I think it's about time to end
4. I hope you can follow up.
5. We learned that Helen had fooled around
6. The youngsters are in the backyard fooling
7. The three prisoners got
8. Let's get at before it gets too late.
9. She wanted a prom dress but ended up
10. I don't understand. What are you getting

• Have

Have is another high-frequency verb that can form numerous phrasal verbs. One that bears analysis is the phrase to have something against. This combination of words means to harbor an attitude of disrespect or dislike. Some examples:

1. What do you have against me? I never did any thing to you.
2. Anna had something against Bob and let him know it.
3. I have nothing against apple pie. I just don't want any.

Notice that with the third example, something changes to nothing in the negative. When this phrase is negated with not, the word anything is used: I don't have anything against apple pie.

- Lay

The phrasal verb to lay off (of) has two meanings: (1) often followed by the preposition of, it means to stop bothering or harassing someone; (2) used without of, it means to end a person's, employment. The latter meaning is sometimes accompanied by the preposition from. The following examples illustrate the variants:

1. Lay off (of) me! You have no right talking to me like that!
2. Tom just won't lay off (of) the man who scratched his new car.
3. Business was bad, and the boss had to lay the men off (from their jobs).

The preposition off in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

1. Mr. Jones laid the whole staff off
 - (a) Mr. Jones laid off the whole staff
 - (b) Mr. Jones laid everyone off

Lead

When the verb to lead is followed by the preposition on, the phrase has the normal meaning of to continue to lead, but when a direct object is included, its meaning becomes to tantalize someone—often with the idea of love or romance. These examples shed further light:

1. Lead on, sir. These men will follow you anywhere.
2. Are you just leading me on? I can't believe your story is true
3. The woman was leading Bill on. She just wanted his money.

The preposition on in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

1. Why are you leading on that nice young man?
2. Why are you leading that nice young man on?
3. Why are you leading him on?

- Let

Combining the verb let with the preposition down yields a phrasal verb that means to disappoint someone. It can also have the meaning of to ease up in an activity. Consider these examples:

1. Don't let me down. Please lend me the money,
2. John knew he was letting her down when he couldn't help her move.
3. Don't let down now. You've got only a mile left to go in the marathon.

The preposition down in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

1. We can't let down Uncle Bill
2. We can't let Uncle Bill down.
3. We can't let him down.

When the verb let is followed by on, the phrase means to be obvious, or to provide knowledge or information. Add the preposition about to cite the topic of the information. To cite the recipient of the information, add the preposition to. Here are some examples:

1. Don't let on that you know me
2. You mustn't let on to Robert about the accident we had.
3. She didn't let on to me about it, but I guessed the truth.

• Make

The verb to make has a variety of uses and can form many phrasal verbs. Here, just a salient few are considered.

To make of has three primary meanings: (1) to interpret someone or something; (2) to make a success of oneself; and (3) in the construction to make something of it, to invite someone to fight. Here are examples

1. I don't know what to make of this note from Karen. What does it mean?
2. John has made something of himself and has become rich in the process.
3. Yes, I took your books! Do you want to make something of it?

Followed by the preposition up, the verb to make produces a few new meanings: (1) to fabricate or lie; (2) to apply cosmetics; (3) often with the pronoun it and using the preposition to, to compensate a person for something; and (4) accompanied by the preposition with, to reconcile.

1. I confess. I made the whole story up.
2. Two women were making the bride up for her wedding.
3. Tom promised to make it up to me, but nothing ever happened.
4. Robert made up with Carmen, but she was still angry.

The preposition up in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

1. John made up another excuse.
2. John made another excuse up
3. John made it up.

If you use the preposition for with to make up, the phrasal verb means to compensate for something that was done.

1. I hope this check will make up for the problem you had with our product.
2. You can't make up for such bad behavior.

When to make up is used with the object the bed, the reference is to putting fresh sheets and coverings on a mattress. With that meaning, the preposition up again has a flexible position around the object:

1. let's make up the bed.
2. bed up.
3. Let's make it up

Exercise 4.2.3 Fill in each blank in the following sentences with the appropriate form of the missing phrasal verb. Use the definition provided in parentheses to choose each verb.

9. I wish that horrid man would just _____ me. (stop bothering)
10. I think it was cruel of you to _____ Jake _____ (tantalize with the idea of love)

Pass

When the verb pass is followed by away, a new meaning is produced: to die. This expression is often used in place of to die in order to blunt the reality and impart a tone of compassion. When the verb pass is followed by the phrase off as, the meaning of the phrasal verb is to represent that someone or something is different from what it really is. Some examples:

1. Old Mrs. Jarvis passed away last night.
2. The man tried to pass the pretty girl off as his daughter.
3. The crooked dealer thought he could pass off an old chair as an antique.

The preposition off in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

1. He passed off a forgery as the real thing.
2. He passed a forgery off as the real thing
3. He passed it off as the real thing.

Set

With the addition of the preposition back, the verb to set has three new meanings: (1) followed by the preposition from, to move something away from other things; (2) to change the time on the clock to an earlier time; and (3) to cause a temporary failure or delay.

1. I set the stack of books back from my work space.
2. I needed more room to write.
3. Tomorrow we have to set all the clocks back an hour.

4. After breakfast the tourists set off for Las Vegas.

The preposition off in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object

That set off my boss.	Who set off the alarm?
That set my boss off.	Who set the alarm off?
That set him off.	Who set it off?

• Stand

When to stand is combined with for, the phrasal verb has two meanings: (1) to symbolize something; and (2) to tolerate something. Look at these examples:

1. The American flag stands for freedom and democracy
2. I won't stand for your rude behavior any longer.

• Take

When to take is combined with back, it has three meanings: (1) to return something; (2) to trigger a memory of something; and (3) to retract something.

1. I took the tools I borrowed back to Jim.
2. Hearing that song takes me back to when I was still in college.
3. Take that back! You know that's not true!

The adverb back in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object

1. Mark wont take back the money.
2. Mark wont take the money back.
3. Mark wont take it back.

Another phrasal verb is formed with to take and the preposition up. It has four primary meanings: (1) to raise the hem of a garment; (2) sometimes using the preposition with, to discuss a subject; (3) to be involved in an activity; and (4) followed by the preposition on, to agree to a proposal. Here are examples of each:

1. That dress is too long. Take it up a couple inches.

3. I need to take up the question of Jim's employment with you.
4. My daughter has taken up stamp collecting.

The preposition up in this phrasal verb has a flexible position around the object:

1. My cousin took up the piano.
2. My cousin took the piano up.
3. My cousin took it up.

• Walk

The verb to walk when followed by out means to leave, or to exit. When the preposition on is added, the meaning is altered: to abandon something, or to jilt someone.

1. Why did you walk out on the last act of the play?
2. I don't understand why she walked out on J I m.
3. Does she have a new boyfriend?

- Warm

When to warm is followed by up, it means to make something warm by placing it over a heat source, or that something is becoming warm. When the preposition to is added to this phrase, a different meaning results: to become comfortable with a person or situation.

1. It will start warming up around the middle of April.
2. As soon as I met Jake, I warmed up to him right away.
3. At first I thought the idea was silly, but I soon warmed up to it.

3. Congress hoped to water down a strict old law.

6. to take up

8. to walk out on

10. to water down

4.2.1 Other parts of speech

If a phrasal verb is transitive, it can be used to form the passive voice. The verb in the phrasal verb is formed as a past participle and is introduced by the auxiliary to be. For example

1. The two brothers were cut out of the will.
2. The stew still has to be warmed up.

Many phrasal verbs can be used as nouns. In some cases, they are combined as one word by means of a hyphen and in other instances they are written as one word.

1. The children played on the floor with the cutouts.
2. after a hard winter, we're hoping for a quick warm-up.

In addition, nouns and past participles formed from phrasal verbs can act as adjectives:

- Nouns as adjectives

The getaway car was a black SUV.
We'll present a follow-up report tomorrow.

- Participles as adjectives

The laid-off workers began to plan a protest
I can't eat watered-down soup.

Exercise 4.2.5 Write three versions of an original sentence for each phrasal verb provided, showing the "flexible position" of the preposition with a noun and, in your third version, with a pronoun

Example:

to break up

His jokes always broke up his friends.

1. to break down

(a)

(b)

(c)

2. to follow up

9. You have to find a way to make these bad grades.
10. He knows all the hottest clubs. He's really it.

4.3 Letter writing

Although the modern world offers many advanced forms of communication, from feature-laden telephones to the Internet, people still need writing skills that can be employed in the various channels. This chapter concentrates on the formats needed for writing letters and for composing e-mails. The two basic forms of letters are the informal or friendly letter and the formal or business letter. Let's first look at how these two types of letter writing affect the composition of the envelope. For both types, the addressee's name appears in the center of the envelope, and the sender's name appears in the upper left corner. On the line below each name is the street address and then the suite or apartment number (if any). The next line contains the city, the two-letter state abbreviation, and the zip code along with the four-number extension (if known). A general rule is to spell out all words in an address other than an addressee's title. However, apartment and boulevard can be abbreviated (Apt. / Blvd.). Compass points that are included with an address do not require periods in their abbreviations (NW, NE, SW, and SE): 31 Jones Avenue NW. If the address is typed and has fewer than four lines, it is generally double-spaced. Otherwise, the address is single-spaced. If the addressee is a close friend or associate of the writer, the person's courtesy title (Mr., Ms., Mrs.) or professional title (e.g., Dr.) is sometimes omitted.

If the letter is written to someone out of the country, the country name is added on a separate line. For example:

Sender of a casual letter	Addresses
John Jones 1825 North Campbell Road Schaumburg, IL 60019-3445 USA	Ms. Barbara Gordon Avon Crescent Kenilworth CV7 3PQ United Kingdom

A business-size envelope is approximately four inches by ten inches and is used for formal letters but is acceptable for use with informal letters as well. Most businesses have business envelopes with the name and address of the company preprinted in the sender's position in the upper left-hand corner or, on occasion, on the flap. In addition, sometimes the name and functional title (e.g., Director of Marketing) of the sender appears above the company name. Compare these examples:

Sender of a business letter	Addresses
Michael Hughes, Manager The Mills Company 1800 East Main Street Cutler, AL. 35044 – 2365	A to Z Contractors 11 Dryden Road NW Kalamazoo, MI 49016

Exercise 4.3.1 Combine the elements in each set of entries as they should appear in the address of an informal letter.

Example 4.3.2 Illinois / Geneva / Mary Jones / 60691 -4404 / 1930 Gordon Drive
Ms. Mary Jones, 1930 Gordon Drive, Geneva, IL 60691-4404

- Dallas / Henry Higgins / 1556 West Palmer Street / Texas / 75211 / Apt. 3*
- Arizona / Tucson / 32 Fifth Street / 85701 / Margaret Rutherford*
- Third Floor / Massachusetts / Ben Roberts / 3103 North Scott Street / Boston / 02197*

4.3.1 Parts of the casual letter

There are not strict rules as to what parts must be included in a casual or friendly letter. In general, the letter consists of the date, the sender's address, the salutation, the body of the letter, the closing, and the signature of the sender. If the recipient is a close friend or associate of the sender and is aware of the sender's address (which appears on the envelope), it is common to omit the sender's address here.

The various parts of this kind of letter, except for the body itself, can be adjusted left or right. Likewise, paragraph indentation is optional in a friendly letter. Consider the following example:

Example Email

March 10, 2009 (date)

1415 North Broadway Street (optional sender's address) Baltimore, MD 21212

Dear Mary, (salutation)

It was great to see you again last week. I really enjoyed your sister's party and had a lot of fun talking with you about old times. I guess we both miss college life. The studying, exams, and occasional boring professor were often a burden, but the great people we met and the recreational activities on campus made all the difference. You helped to make my years in college special. I'm glad we got together again at the party. I hope to see more of you.

Yours truly, (closing)

[Signature]

An alternative approach is to place the date and the optional sender's address at the upper right of the page. Note that a comma follows both the salutation and the closing in a casual letter.

The closing of a friendly letter can take various forms, the choice of which depends in part on the nature of the relationship between the writer and addressee. Here are some frequently used closings:

Casual	Very friendly
Truly	Fondly
Truly yours	Sincerely
Affectionately	With love
	With all my love

Exercise 4.3.3 Write a casual letter to a close friend named Mary Smith (or another name of your choosing, to tell her of your new job and to invite her to a party.

4.3.2 Parts of the business letter

It is customary to adhere to certain rules when composing a business letter. That said, there is a contemporary tendency to relax those strictures, particularly when a businessperson is communicating regularly with another businessperson and wishes to make the relationship less structured and more cordial.

Let's take the prudent course here and walk through the rules as they are normally followed:

- A business letter should be typed and composed in the Times New Roman font, twelve point.
- The date is the first element of the business letter and is either justified left or centered on the page. In American style, the month is written out and is followed by the date, which is separated from the year by a comma: March 10, 2009.
- If preprinted letterhead is not being used, the sender's address follows after a skipped line below the date and is justified left on the page. The sender's name should not be included in this part of the letter, since it appears at the bottom. (In a less used style, the sender's address appears below the signature at the end of the letter.)
- After another skipped line below the sender's address, the recipient's name and address are entered; these lines are also justified left. The first line here is the recipient's name, which is preceded by a courtesy or professional title and is followed by the person's functional title when applicable. On the lines below are, in order, the department (if any); the company name; the street address; and the city, state, and zip code. If you are writing to someone in a foreign country, the country name is the last element of this address and should be typed in capital letters. For example

Ms. Joanne Keller	Dr. Martin Braun
Legal Department	Werner-Versand KG
Shuster and Kane, Inc.	18 Marktplatz
1600 West Schiller Avenue	86123 Augsburg
Milwaukee, WI 53201	GHRMANY

- Another line is skipped before the salutation. The salutation should usually include the same courtesy or professional title as in the address line and is followed by a colon. In a friendlier style, only the first name is used, but it is still followed by a colon (rather than a comma as with informal letters). For example:

Dear Ms. Keller: Dear Dr. Braun: Dear Joanne:

Again, a line is skipped between the salutation and the body of the letter. The body should be single-spaced like the other parts of the letter, except that a line is skipped between paragraphs when the text is justified left. Paragraph indentation is optional and is sometimes used when the date, closing, and signature lines are centered on the page. The three commonly used formats for a business letter are block, modified block, and indented modified block. Here are examples of each:

Block format	Modified block format	Indented modified
Date	Date	Date
Sender's address	Sender's address	Sender's address
Recipient's address	Recipient's address	Recipient's address
Salutation	Salutation	Salutation
Body of letter	Body of letter	Body of letter
Closing	Closing	Closing
Signature	Signature	Signature
Enclosure	Enclosure	Enclosure

Note that if the writer is enclosing any documents in the business letter, it is customary to type the word Enclosure(s) one line below the signature line.

business letter

- Frequently, the writer of a business letter informs the recipient of the topic of the letter by adding a brief statement before the salutation. That statement follows the abbreviation Re (regarding). A line is skipped before and after the statement. Here is an example of this structure:

Simple Letter

Mr. Thomas Hanson, Vice President
Adams, Inc.
12 Victory Lane
Chicago, IL 6069
Re: Recent Software Problems
Dear Mr. Hanson:

I appreciate your quick response to my earlier problems with your firm's accounting software. The downloads you provided solved my problems. However, that solution was only temporary.

At the present time, the input of all forms of data is working correctly. However, now the simplest equations that require either addition or subtraction are providing completely inaccurate totals.

I need this software to be working properly and in the very near future. Please send a technician to my office to end this predicament.

- When a letter is written to no specific person at a company, the salutation is usually Dear Sir or Madam: or To whom it may concern:. These phrases are also helpful when the gender of the addressee is not clear. For instance, is Chris Jones a man or a woman? Is A. J. Barrons a man or a woman? It is considered good form to obtain the name of the appropriate person in the company to whom the letter should be directed (and to clarify the gender, as well as the correct spelling, if necessary), whenever possible, and to use that person's name in the salutation. The two vague salutations cited in this section should be used only when that is impossible.
- The closing of a business letter is traditionally a simple, respectful phrase such as the following:
Sincerely, Regards, Best regards,
- Then four lines are skipped as a space for the signature. Below the signature is the writer's name typed out.

Exercise 4.3.4 Combine the elements in each set that follows as they should appear in the address and salutation of a business letter.

1. The Stone Company / Denver, CO / Alice French / 3103 Scott Street / Design Department / 80211 / Chief Accountant / A Proposal for the Jenner Project

2. Manager / 1515 South Wellington Avenue / Charles Gibbs / Atlanta, GA / Kaufman Brothers Shoes / 30303

Exercise 4.3.5 Write a business letter to the address provided, requesting information regarding resorts in Florida and cruises in the Caribbean. Include personal information: number of travelers, range of cost, age level, preferred dates of travel, required facilities, and so on.

- E-mails

Messages and letters sent by electronic mail should follow the format of a friendly letter for recipients who are close to the writer and should follow the format of a business letter for those who are on a more formal basis. E-mail format automatically provides the date and the e-mail address of the sender, but the sender must type in the recipient's e-mail address in the line marked To. In the line marked CC, the sender types in the e-mail address(es) of anyone who should receive a copy of the message. Also, in the line marked BCC, the sender types in the e-mail address(es) of any- one who will receive a blind copy of the message. A blind copy means that the recipient's e-mail address will not appear in the transmission. E-mail accounts have a function allowing the writer to store a list of e-mail addresses. When an address is needed, the writer clicks on the option Insert Address, or similar nomenclature, to access the list and to select the e-mail address(es) to be placed automatically in the To line. In the Subject or Re field, the writer enters a phrase that summarizes the intent of the message; for example: Mom feels better or Proposal for Teardown on State Street. E-mail formats allow the sender to access files stored on a computer and transmit them along with the main message as an Attachment. An attachment can be a single file or a series of files. Most e-mail messages can be written in a variety of fonts and colors, which can be chosen from a list provided as a feature of the e-mail program. In a business e-mail, it is wise to avoid unusual fonts and elaborate changes of color or size. New Times Roman in black is always correct.

Sample e-mail

To: Jane Michaels (janem@datafirm.net)

From: William Ort (billort@datafirm.net)

Subject: Friday night

Hi, Jane. They're going to show the Bulls game at Harold's Tap on Friday. It should be a wild game. Can you join me? I'll be there with Mary and Steve. Is 7 P.M. good for you? Hope to see you there. Let me know for sure. Thanks.

Bill

The salutation, body, and closing of an e-mail should, in most cases, resemble those elements as they appear in a friendly or business letter. In friendly and casual messages, there is a tendency to abbreviate words when possible and to make the content brief. There also is a great deal of license taken with salutations. Naturally, Dear Bill is an appropriate salutation, but you will also encounter Hi, Bill or just Bill. In many cases, the salutation is simply avoided. Something similar occurs with the closing of a casual e-mail. Sincerely is always appropriate, but you will also see So long or Bye for now or Later, among other expressions. In fact, a closing might be omitted and the e-mail ended with the name of the sender. And even the sender's name can be omitted. Except in business e-mails, there is often an attempt to incorporate the jargon used in chat rooms, apparently in an effort to be contemporary and casual (LOI or laugh out loud, for example). Employing this trend in e-mails is the option of the writer. However, an e-mail writer cannot go wrong by conforming to the rules described for friendly and business letters.

Exercise 4.3.6 Write an e-mail to a friend, requesting the return of a personal item and including an invitation to join you at an event.

Exercise 4.3.7 Write an email to the manager of a company at which you have applied for a job to learn about the status of your application.

Exercise 4.3.8 Write an email to the company that painted your house or apartment, citing a complaint with the job and specifying a course of action to remedy the situation.

4.4 Let's write!

You have now completed a series of exercises that have given you practice in writing sentences of various types and containing all the essential structures of the English language. That means that you are ready to be more creative. The following writing exercises will permit you to apply what you know about sentence writing in two formats: original sentences that require the use of specified grammatical and vocabulary elements and original sentences that require a specific content. In both cases, challenge yourself to create interesting and intelligent sentences. Do not write below your level of skill.

4.4.1 Specified grammatical elements

When a grammatical element is specified for use in a sentence, the nature of that sentence is dependent upon the grammatical element. For example, specifying the future tense determines when in time an action will take place. Specifying antonyms suggests that a comparison will be made in a sentence.

Exercise 4.4.1 Using each set of words and phrases provided, write an original sentence that conforms to the grammar cues in parentheses. Add as many words as necessary.

Example:

(past perfect tense) he/ forget / umbrella/because/mother/ sick/hospital

He had forgotten his umbrella, because he had been worried about his sick mother in the hospital.

1. (present perfect tense) girlfriend/wait/gift/birthday
2. (passive voice) customs official/fire/ drunk/late
3. (past tense) when/in Washington, DC./interview/representative/ Colorado
4. (present tense) whenever/abroad/try/language/country
5. (interrogative who) say / defendant/guilty/fine
6. (conjunction although) Germany /locate/near/ Denmark/Scandinavian country
7. (antonym) former wife/beautiful/new girlfriend
8. (passive voice) week ago /barn/burn down/lightning
9. (future tense) weak/infant/struggle/health/born/infection
10. (present perfect tense) behave / as if/first prize

Exercise 4.4.2 Complete the following sentences with any appropriate phrase. Include the cue word or phrase provided in parentheses in your sentence in any appropriate form.

1. The newsman reported that .(peace treaty)
2. We got our tickets .(wait for)
3. Why are you talking about ? (and not)
4. Tina dialed the number, (hang up)
5. What do you have against ? (save money)

6. I undress, take a quick shower, (as fast as)
7. Oh, (costume)
8. although we had a terrible argument. (each other)
9. Whose fault ? (she had an accident)
10. In 1455 Gutenberg (invention)

Exercise 4.4.3 Fill in the blanks with appropriate phrases to form complete sentences; use the tense provided in parentheses.

Example:

(past) Your daughter was diligent, but your son was quite lazy.

1. (present). just as expensive as. 2. (past).
 sharper 3. (future). jump farther. 4. (present).
 valuable but 5. (present perfect) Either. or 6. (present).
 the shortest route ?
 7. (past). one of the least likely 8. (present) Here, 9.
 (present perfect). finished, or ?
 10. (present) I myself rather than.

Specific content

Now it's time to write completely original sentences without conforming to a paradigm or in response to cues. The only suggestions you need to follow are the topics provided for your writing. Be sure to challenge yourself. Do not take the easy road, because having come this far in this book, you're ready for some real writing.

Exercise 4.4.4 Write a paragraph that describes the home in which you live. You can cite such aspects as its size, the rooms, the furniture, your family, decorations, activities, and even holidays you celebrate.

Exercise 4.4.5 Write a paragraph that describes the schools you attended, favorite teachers and subjects, friends you made, activities in which you participated, degrees you have earned, and how you hope to apply your education to your career.

Exercise 4.4.6 Write a paragraph that describes the plot of a book or the content of an article that you have recently read.

Exercise 4.4.7 Write your autobiography. My Life So far.

4.5 Index of Answer key

Before start!

The solutions given are simplified and suggested solutions, but they are not the only ones, but there are many solutions that can be equivalent solutions and even better, and in order to use the solutions in the best way, it is preferable to finish chapter by chapter, as this will facilitate the process of improving writing and syntax significantly.

4.3.3	August 30, 2009 Dear Mary, It was good to see you again last week. I'm glad to hear that your mother is well again and able to go back to work. I'm happy to say that I'm back at work, too. I found a job in Peoria teaching eighth-grade math in Mather Junior High School. I'm so happy about this position, and I can hardly wait for the kids to show up next week. It's been a lot preparation, but I'm enjoying everything. Gayle and I are having a housewarming party on Labor Day. We hope you can come to Peoria and help us celebrate. We've got the guest room ready for your visit. We're eager to see you again. Fondly, Mark

4.3.5	June 19, 2009 1416 Miller Road Washington, DC 20099 Mr. Victor Wallace Sunny-side Travel Agency 909 E. Culver Avenue St. Petersburg, FL 33705 Re: Travel to Florida Dear Mr. Wallace: I received your brochures last week and am interested in a little more information regarding a ten-day vacation in one of two Florida resorts: Sunny Sands in Sanibel and Beacon House on Key Largo. My preferred arrival dates are either Saturday, September 12, or Saturday, September 19. We are a family of five. Our three children range in age from four to eleven years, and we worry that the resorts that interest us are oriented only to adults. Are there activities for young children? Are there babysitting services? Naturally, the cost for a vacation like this is a concern. Your brochure did not specify how many guests can stay in one room. If our children can be in a single room with us, that would make this vacation more affordable. Do some of the rooms provide kitchenettes? Does the resort have a laundry for guests? Are there tennis courts and a gym? If a Florida resort vacation will cost too much, I would consider taking my family on a Caribbean cruise during the same time frame in September. Please send me information on such cruises only if the cost of the Florida resort is more than $ 190.00 per night for our family of five. Thank you. Sincerely, Henry Smythe Henry Smythe
4.3.6	To: Mike Towers (mike@datafirm.net) From: James Hill (jimhill@datafirm.net) Subject: Did you forget? Mike, I lent you my surfboard more than a month ago, and you still haven't returned it. I know you've been back from Hawaii for more than a week and can't be using it here in Minneapolis's snow. Just kidding. But I need it by next week. My brother wants to use it. Don't forget about the party at Laura's house on Saturday. Are you bringing a date? I asked Kim to go with me, but she said she has other plans. Know another girl who needs a date? See you soon. Jim
4.3.7	To: Jean King (jeanking@datafirm.net) From: Marie McDonald (mm800@datafirm.net) Subject: My application Dear Ms. King: I enjoyed our conversation over the phone on May 2. I was very pleased to receive your invitation to send you my application for employment with Datafirm and my résumé. I feel certain that you must have received them well over a week ago, and I am eager to learn what you think. Since last speaking with you, I have completed my course on the Italian renaissance and received a grade of A. That means that my course work is now ended, and I shall receive my degree in June, which would be just in time to start with Datafirm. Looking forward to your reply. Sincerely, Marie S. McDonald
4.3.8	To: L. L. Jenkins (jenkins@datafirm.net) From: Robert Smith (bob-smith@datafirm.net) Subject: Invoice number 5544 Dear Sir or Madam: On October 5 of this year, I signed a contract with your company to paint my living room and dining room. The work began two weeks late and took five days instead of two. However, it is not the time the job took but the quality of the work that I am contacting you about. The two coats of paint I contracted for turned out to be just one coat, and the old paint is showing through. I'd like someone to come out to complete the job to my satisfaction, or I will feel compelled not to send you my final payment as shown in Invoice #5544. Please contact me immediately to resolve this problem. Thank you. My phone number: (312) 555-6061 Robert Smith, Attorney at Law
